SIX HOMES SET AFIRE

Planes Collide, All Killed

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727 with 133 persons aboard collided in flight with a small Cessna today and plunged into a residential neighborhood in possibly the worst air accident in U.S. history.

Everyone aboard the jet as well as a student pilot and his instructor aboard the Cessna and at least one person on the ground were reported killed. Several others on the ground were rushed to hospitals.

The death toll was apparently the worst for an airplane collision in U.S. history. In December, 1960, two commercial planes collided over New York City, killing 128 aboard the planes and six others on the ground.

The worst air disaster in history occurred March 27, 1977, at Tenerife in the Canary Islands, when two jumbo jets collided, killing 582 persons.

The PSA plane, Flight 182 from Sacramento and Los Angeles, was on its landing approach when it collided with a Cessna 150 at an altitude of 3,000 feet, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

"I saw the jet plane . . . It was smoking on the right side," said Phil Hopkins, a witness. "The right inboard engine was burning and it exploded into a fireball . . . and spiralled to the ground."

The 727 smashed into a row of houses in the North Park district, about five miles from the city airport, Lindbergh Field. As it careened along the street wreckage was spewed across a wide area, injuring several persons. At least six homes were set afire.

Two hours after the crash, fires still blazed in at least five of the wood-frame houses that line the streets of the east-central neighborhood where the plane fell.

Greyish-black smoke billowed over the area and fragments of bodies could be seen on rooftops and in the streets.

Fire trucks were massed in the area, which authorities cordoned off from a crowd of more than 4,000 persons that gathered.

When New England Patriots played Oakland Raiders in a pre-season National Football League game, one of their star players, Darryl Stingley, was hospitalized through an accident on the field. Sunday the Patriots returned to Oakland for a regular NFL game and "won one" for Stingley with a 21-14 victory over the Raiders, scoring the the winning touchdown with 16 seconds to play. Page 10.

Despite holding a wide edge in play, B.C. Lions couldn't get a touchdown in the first half of their Canadian Football League game at Winnipeg Sunday. Six field goals by Luis Passaglia were not enough as Ralph Brock threw four touchdown passes to lead the Bombers to a 32-25 victory and cripple the Lions' playoff hopes. Page 10.

Lyman Bostock, an outfielder with California Angels and one of major league baseball's brightest stars, is dead at 27, a victim of circumstance in a strange shooting affair at Gary, Ind. Page 10.

Tom Watson returned to the professional golf tour after a three-week break and played like a well-rested man, scoring a three-stroke triumph Sunday for his fifth victory of the year. Page 14.

Los Angeles Dodgers qualified for the post-season playoffs in the major league baseball Sunday by scoring a 4-0 victory over San Diego Padres to capture the National League West pennant for a second straight year. In the American League East, the Yankees remained one game ahead of the Boston Red Sox. Page 11.

Dollar Below 85¢

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar slipped below the 85-cent U.S. level on international money markets today for the first time since 1933.

At 11 a.m. PDT it was quoted at 84.98 cents against its American counterpart, down more than a quarter-of-a-cent from Friday's closing rate of 85.28 cents.

Announcements by some leading American banks that they are increasing their interest rates on loans to their most credit-worthy customers to 9¾ per cent from 9½ per cent helped today's slide.

Traders have said repeated increases in U.S. interest rates are causing money market participants to sell their Canadian dollars and buy into stronger currencies.

Friday's final quote was the lowest the dollar has closed at since May, 1933, when it was worth 86.77 cents. Last Monday it changed hands at 85.54 cents, while a month ago it closed at 87.37 cents. The record low of 80.08 cents was set in December, 1931.

The U.S. dollar opened the trading week slightly lower against all major European currencies except the British pound and made a slight gain in Tokyo while the price of gold rose to new highs in light trading.

Gold opened in London at $217.25 an ounce, more than $3 higher than last Friday.

Trading Imbalance Fingered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top official of the International Monetary Fund said today imbalances in trade and growth among industrial countries have led to "a very difficult and potentially dangerous situation" in the world economy.

Jacques de Larosiere, the new managing director of the 135-country IMF, said a sharp decline in the U.S. dollar is primarily the result of these imbalances, which are only partly the fault of the United States.

And de Larosiere made clear he does not expect the dollar will become stable until the major countries bring their economies into closer alignment.

Basically, de Larosiere, a former top French bureaucrat who became IMF director in June, took the U.S. position on the problems of the dollar.

He said stop-gap measures such as huge purchases of dollars on world money markets would not help the dollar in the long run and actually could worsen its position against other major currencies.

The IMF's policy-making interim committee said a stronger U.S. dollar and a return to healthy economic growth around the world depend on better co-ordination of economic policies by the major industrial countries

De Larosiere delivered an opening address to about 3,500 delegates at the 33rd annual joint meeting here of the IMF and the World Bank. U.S. President Carter planned to deliver welcoming remarks later today.

One of the major issues on the agenda of the four days of meetings, a strengthening of the IMF's financial resources, was decided by the interim committee before the formal sessions began.

Committee chairman Denis Healy, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, told a news conference that the U.S. economy should grow more slowly next year while other countries should speed economic growth.

MINNIE MT. HEARING

One of the key planning decisions facing Saanich council in 1978 will be made under the spotlight of a public hearing Wednesday.

The proposed mixed-density residential development by Broadmead Farms Ltd. on the Minnie Mountain area of Ten Mile Point is supported by council's planning advisers but apparently opposed by the majority of area residents.

In an article on page 9 today the Times looks at the claimed pros and cons of this multi-million-dollar development proposal.

NEWS BRIEFS

Baby Drowns

SURREY (CP) — An 11-month-old girl drowned Sunday at her home in this municipality after she fell into a five-gallon bucket. RCMP said Harinder Jit Badh was apparently trying to reach for some vegetables soaking in water when she fell into the bucket.

Sailor Rescued

WHITE ROCK (CP) — Gerry Langtry of Surrey was rescued early Sunday after his 3.6-metre sailboat had been adrift for more than nine hours. Police said Langtry had been washed overboard several times and spent about an hour in the water after the mast on his boat broke.

U.K. Workers Out

LONDON (AP) — Thousands of auto workers at Fords plants throughout Britain streamed out of factory gates today over wage claims that could bring the government's pay policy down in ruins.

Policemen Shot

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (Reuter) — Two Spanish civil guard policemen were shot and killed today in the market of this Basque country town, police said. The four gunmen escaped in a taxi.

3-Day Crawl for Help By Broken Deaf-Mute

SEATTLE (AP) — Joseph Heller, a 33-year-old deaf mute, spent three days crawling for help after he fell five storeys in an elevator shaft, police say.

"I'm amazed that he made it," said Sgt. Floyd Walker. "The torture he went through must have been unbelievable."

Heller suffered fractures of the neck, pelvis, ribs and upper right arm, as well as a broken leg and head injuries, a Harborview Medical Centre spokesman said.

He was reported in serious but improved condition late Sunday. The broken neck did not appear to be serious or paralyzing, the spokesman said.

Police said Heller, bloody and swollen, was found in a doorway of the partially-vacant building Saturday by a passer-by who notified police.

Officer Daniel Fordice said Heller, in barely legible scrawl, wrote "three days" on a piece of paper when asked when he had fallen.

"It's evident that he had been there for that long," Fordice said. "He had blood on his side and it was long dried."

Police traced the 20-metre trail Heller apparently followed through dust and debris in the warehouse-type building. Before even reaching the floor level, Heller had had to climb out of the pit at the bottom of the elevator shaft—an amazing feat with a broken neck, Fordice said.

The elevator doorway on an upper floor was open, with no safety gate across the doorway, Fordice said.

"There was no light in the elevator and it's possible the man could have been stumbling around in the dark and fell down the shaft," he added.

Mideast Peace Plan Extolled to Knesset

Times News Services

Prime Minister Menachem Begin formally recommended to the Israeli parliament today the withdrawal of Jewish settlers from Sinai in exchange for peace with Egypt.

Declaring he spoke "with a heavy heart and a clear conscience," Begin told a sometimes uproarious session of the Knesset that the Israeli-Egyptian accords reached at Camp David, Md., brought Israel "one of the greatest events of our generation."

The moment for which Israelis have yearned since the birth of Israel now is at hand, he said.

"After 30 years and five wars, bloodshed and grief we have reached the moment when we are granted, with heavy sacrifices, the opportunity of signing a peace treaty with an Arab people (Egyptians) numbering more than 40 million," he said.

The parliamentary session was adjourned in uproar shortly after starting debate on the Camp David accords. The recess was ordered after Begin was persistently heckled by a militant defender of Jewish settlements in the Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

An affirmative vote in the Knesset will clear the way for final negotiations to end 30 years of war and uneasy truce between Israel and Egypt. A negative vote will nullify the Camp David agreements.

Reliable sources say Begin argued forcefully in an eight-hour cabinet session Sunday for approval of the Camp David framework for an Arab-Israeli peace agreement. Eleven ministers backed the plan, two opposed it, one abstained and three declined to vote without party authorization. One minister was absent. Both opponents were members of Begin's

$50 LOTTERY WIN FOR CODE BUSTER

EDMONTON (CP) — Cracking the provincial lottery's scratch 'n win system did not give Bob Silverthorn of Tofield, Alta., the big one, but it did make him richer.

The 35-year-old math and science won $50 in Sunday night's draw when he matched the last three digits on two tickets with winning numbers.

"It's not bad getting a $50 return on $1,500 worth of free tickets," Silverthorn said. "I couldn't be happier if I'd won a million."

Silverthorn developed a system to pick out tickets with a prize of free tickets. The message revealing the prize is concealed under a silver patch on the ticket which the holder scratches away.

Customers no longer have a random choice from the available tickets at a sales outlet which Silverthorn said takes away his opportunity to use his system to pick out free bonus tickets.

"If I can pick up another batch of free ones, I will. But I sure don't believe in paying for lottery tickets."

Immersion French Faulted

MONTREAL (CP) — English-speaking students who have spent six years in total immersion classes trying to learn French speak it no better than pupils who have taken five months of "intensive" courses, says the co-ordinator of second-language teaching for an area school board.

Lise Billy, who has been monitoring the progress of 350 students in her board's schools since 1975, presented a study on the immersion system at a conference on applied linguistics held here.

Her study calls into question the technique for second-language teaching that has become almost universal in Quebec during the last decade. (For immersion in B.C. see story on page 7).

One of Mrs. Billy's main criticisms of the immersion method is that language is viewed as incidental to the teaching of regular subject material.

She says students have to guess at syntax because it's rarely, if ever, taught.

Swiss Canton 'Separates'

GENEVA (Reuter) — A national referendum in Switzerland on Sunday voted heavily in favor of self-government for the northern Jura region bordering France in a bid to end 30 years of separatist strife.

Voting ran 4-to-1 to make the French-speaking, predominantly-Roman Catholic region of 68,000 people the 23rd Swiss canton, or semi-autonomous state, the first new one in the Alpine confederation since 1815.

The turnout was larger than average, with 41.5 per cent of the 3.8 million electorate voting. About 82.3 per cent voted to split northern Jura from the Protestant Swiss-German canton of Bern.

The idyllic Jura region of rolling hills and farmland has been part of the Bern canton since 1815 and the desire for independence has sparked violence in the last few decades. Separatist agitation led to rioting, arson and dynamite attacks. But only one person has been killed in the violence over the years.

From Montreal, the Mouvement National des Quebecois offered congratulations Sunday to the separatist leaders of the Jura region.

In a message to the Mouvement National du Jura Suisse, Claude Rochon, president of the coalition of Quebec nationalist groups, emphasized the kinship Quebec nationalists feel for "their francophone brothers of the Swiss Jura," who have proved by establishing a semi-autonomous state that "history and geography give way before the right of a people to self-determination."

Striking Posties Await Gov't Move

OTTAWA (CP) - Leaders of striking letter carriers say there are indications the federal government will come down hard against the union's legal strike, now in its fourth day.

"There's no fairness in it," said C. N. Nelson, a vice-president of the 19,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada.

An ad hoc committee of cabinet ministers concerned with the post office plans a special meeting today to discuss the heated dispute, a spokesman in the prime minister's office said. Time and location were not made public.

The meeting would include Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, Treasury Board President Robert Andras, Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet and possibly others.

There are reports that the government will not legislate the letter carriers back to work until the strike position of 22,000 inside postal workers is clarified later this week.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) will be in a strike position early next week, seven days after a conciliation report is filed.

The theory is the government will wait until the CUPW's next move is known and, if necessary, issue one back-to-work law for both groups.

Nelson said about 6,000 carriers in 25 locals are off their jobs today. Just less than one-third of the 22,000 CUPW members were also off the job because they refused to cross letter carriers' picket lines.

A post office spokesman said there was no mail moving from Saint John, N.B., Quebec City, the Ontario centres of Toronto, London, Windsor, Kitchener-Waterloo, and in Edmonton and Regina.

Nelson said workers in those centres likely will be back on their jobs Tuesday morning "and there is a possibility of some others going out."

He did not name the next targets for rotating strikes that started midnight Thursday night in the contract dispute over pay.

"There have been no further overtures from management about further meetings," Nelson said.

The letter carriers say they want full protection from cost-of-living increases plus a six-per-cent increase in basic salaries.

Andras said Saturday "there is no money available for a settlement. The government is absolutely determined."

Parks Talks

Federal and provincial ministers responsible for national and provincial parks today opened a two-day policy review session in Victoria.

The purpose of the meetings are to provide a review of national policies and to ensure their integration with provincial programs.

The material the delegates are discussing is based on a three-year review of national policies initiated by the federal Parks Canada and completed this spring.

The Victoria session provides the first opportunity for joint ministerial review and discussion of the national policy proposals.

Included in the discussions will be a review of the current and future directions for the national parks program.

CIA: 20 in Ottawa?

TORONTO (CP) — A U.S. lawyer says a number of officials at the American embassy in Ottawa are agents of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

William Schapp, co-publisher of a periodical called Covert Action Information Bulletin and author of a book on CIA agents published last week in the United States and soon to be released in Canada, said as many as 20 CIA agents are plying their trade in Ottawa.

Schapp, who named a few of the agents during a recent visit here, alleges that the chief of CIA operations in Canada is Stacy Hulse, an attache of the U.S. embassy.

Schapp said Hulse is the former chief of CIA operations in Greece and was ordered to prevent the fall of the Greek military government in 1974.

He said Stephen Winsky, another embassy official now in Ottawa, used to be stationed in Finland and specialized in smugggling Soviet defectors to Sweden.

At a conference organized by the Law Union of Ontario, Schapp said he wants to expose the alleged intelligence agents because the CIA has caused more misery, suffering and death than any other organization in the world.

His organization, Covert Action, wants to publicize as many agents' names as possible, he said, because it believes that individuals cannot separate their own responibility from that of the agencies they work for.

The CIA wants to corrupt and manipulate Canadians and change events to the way its wants them to go, Schapp charged.

AUTO DITCHED-5 HURT

Five persons aged 14-17 were hurt early Sunday when their car struck a highway divider and crashed into a ditch near McTavish Road.

Sidney RCMP said the car driven on Patricia Bay Highway by Leroy Raymond Jones, 17, of East Saanich Reserve, struck the divider in the 8800 block and swerved out of control.

Jones, Albert Paul and Carman Black were reported in satisfactory condition, while Lennard and Patsy Paul were described as fair. All are believed from Saanich.

Six-Per-Cent Pay Hike For Armed Forces

Six-per-cent pay increases for members of the Canadian armed forces up to the rank of lieutenant-colonel will go into effect Oct. 1, Defence Minister Barney Danson said today.

Increases for colonels will be retroactive to April 1, 1977, when they received their last raise.

The individual increases vary with technical skills and classifications.

A private entering the service will receive $530 per month instead of $500.

A corporal infantryman's pay will increase from $1,142 to $1,205. A warrant officer financial clerk will receive $1,590, an increase of $93.

A direct entry university graduate enrolled in the pilot classification while under training will receive $1,045, up $55.

A major (other than a pilot, doctor, lawyer or dentist holding that rank) will now receive $2,335, an increase of $150 per month while a colonel will receive $2,920.

Danson said the increases make the armed forces' salaries comparable to those of other public service groups.

He said pay for reserve forces will also be increased to make them comparable with the regular force.

The last increase for servicemen and servicewomen up to the rank of lieutenant-colonel was in October, 1977.

RIFLEMAN SEIZED AFTER FIVE HOURS

A man with a rifle held Duncan RCMP at bay five hours late Sunday night before being subdued by a friend and policemen.

Police, led by an emergency squad commander, went to a Beverly Street apartment building after a man called asking for help.

Police found the person had a high-powered rifle and was threatening to shoot himself.

From about 7:30 to 12:30 he refused to put down his rifle and come out, but he did permit a close friend to enter and talk to him, police said.

The rifleman was to be charged this morning with dangerous use of a firearm.

the weather

Weather map unavailable today

Drier and warmer air is slowly pushing up from the south. This will result in considerable sunshine and pleasant temperatures over southern B.C. over the next couple of days. The clearing skies will also bring overnight fog to some areas but it should dissipate rapidly once the sun is out. Meanwhile, a frontal system lies across central B.C. from northern Vancouver Island to the headwaters of the Fraser River. Cloud and shower activity can be expected near the front today but it should weaken considerably by Tuesday. Widespread fog over northern parts of the province will dissipate leading to sunny breaks in the afternoon. A new front from the Pacific will, however, bring a fresh band of precipitation to the outer coast late Tuesday.

Rebels Start Hit-Run Tactics

MANAGUA (Reuter) — More than 20 bombs exploded in poor areas of Managua overnight Saturday as guerrillas announced the start of a hit-and-run war against Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza's government, sources said Sunday.

The home-made bombs caused little damage and were designed to harass the National Guard, which crushed a revolt in four Nicaragua cities in the last two weeks.

In southeastern Managua, youths burned buses to form a barricade on one road but fled before troops arrived.

The proletarian faction of the Sandinist National Liberation Front, which led the rebellion, said in a leaflet it was launching a guerrilla war against the government.

The group said it would not try to hold ground and provoke the government into launching massive attacks as it did in the cities of Masaya, Leon, Chinandega and Esteli.

The government counterattack over the last two weeks resulted in extensive civilian casualties and caused widespread destruction from air raids and shelling.

The proletarian faction, which has been active in the poor areas of major cities, said any member of the guerrilla opposition who tried to come to terms with the government would be considered an enemy.

Meantime, a special emissary from U.S. President Carter has met with Somoza, leading to speculation that Carter is urging the embattled leader to resign.

The U.S. embassy confirmed that special envoy William Jorden met Saturday with Somoza.

West German Police Nail Two Terrorists

DORTMUND, West Germany (AP) — Police have tentatively identified one of two suspected terrorists arrested after a gun battle Sunday as Angelika Speitel, one of West Germany's most wanted radicals.

Miss Speitel, 23, was one of 14 suspected Red Army Faction leftists wanted for the 1977 murders of federal chief prosecutor Siegfried Buback, banker Juergen Ponto and industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer.

Police launched an all-out search for her and three other women earlier this month after a shootout with another terrorist led police to an arsenal in nearby Duesseldorf and captured documents indicated the terrorists were planning a new campaign.

Police were called Sunday by persons who heard shooting in the woods on the outskirts of Dortmund. The police found two men and a women engaged in what appeared to be a target practice session with sub-machine-guns.

Police spokesman Ulrich Haffke said the trio opened fire on the approaching police, killing one and wounding another. The police returned the fire, wounding the woman and one of the men, but the second man escaped.

Positive identification of the woman as Miss Speitel has been delayed because the police do not have her fingerprints on file, but "only a small question mark remains behind her identification," Haffke said.

Police Chief Wolfgang Manner said the captured man is Michael Knoll, 27, another suspected terrorist. Police said his fingerprints were found in the Duesseldorf hideout, and they issued a warrant for his arrest last Friday.

He is reported in critical condition.

Rhodesians Hit 25 Rebel Bases

SALISBURY (AP) — The Rhodesian military command says its troops destroyed 25 black nationalist guerrilla bases located up to 64 kilometres inside neighboring Mozambique in a four-day sweep that brought the raiders into contact with the Mozambique army.

A military communique issued Sunday made no mention of casualties incurred in Rhodesia's latest cross-border foray.

A 20-minute government film of the raid, broadcast on the government television network, showed white soldiers setting fire to thatched huts and burning a Soviet-made armored personnel carrier.

One white soldier was interviewed in what he said was a guerrilla camp. He said it held 4,000 guerrillas before it was blasted.

The communique said the largest target of the airborne raiders was a complex of eight guerrilla camps. The camps in Mozambique are used by guerrillas of Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army.

Soldiers of the Mozambique army based at Chimoio, 54 kilometres from Rhodesia's eastern border, "chose to move into the terrorist bases during the operations," the military command said.

It said no civilians were in the camps attacked.

"The task of the security forces was the destruction of the bases, the collection of intelligence, the destruction of logistics and elimination of terrorists. All these missions were successfully completed," the statement said.

It said the cross-border raids will continue, adding, "The success of these operations is unquestioned."

Meanwhile guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo has discounted chances for a peaceful transition to black rule in Rhodesia, saying the issue can only be settled by a fight to the finish.

Answering questions from listeners from Britain, Nkomo said the Anglo-American plan for all-party talks on Rhodesia's future was dead as a result of recent new offensives by Rhodesian security forces and the arrest of Patriotic Front supporters under provisions of martial law.

Jomo Successor

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Acting President Daniel Arap Moi is assured of succeeding the late Jomo Kenyatta as Kenya's second president.

He presented the only nomination papers of the sole and governing party, the Kenyan African National Union (KANU). Kenyatta died Aug. 22.

In a brief statement at party headquarters, Moi pledged to carry on the late leader's work in maintaining peace and unity.

A national KANU conference will convene Oct. 6 to adopt Moi formally as the party's candidate. He will shortly thereafter be declared president in the absence of any other candidate.

Moi will then serve out the remaining year of Kenyatta's third term of office. As the party's new president, he will be under no obligation to seek another mandate from the party next year and will therefore most probably then be declared elected head of state for a further five-year term.

Snore-Filled Draw Ends Chess Game #25

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (Reuter) — Defending champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi settled for their 19th draw Sunday night in 10 weeks of world championship chess — and a spectator was ordered out of the hall for snoring.

Korchnoi held an apparent advantage in their resumed 25th game, but offered the draw when Karpov, defending accurately, prevented him from forcing a breakthrough.

Karpov, who leads by four wins to two in the marathon search for six wins and championship victory, accepted immediately.

Korchnoi had tried hard to exploit a pawn advantage in the game that lasted 80 moves in more than eight hours.

When play was adjourned Saturday night with Korchnoi sealing his 42nd move, experts considered the challenger had a clear advantage.

But later analysis produced several ways for the champion to hold the position.

Before the resumption, Korchnoi's aides encouraged him not to press too hard for a win if Karpov chose any of the good defensive lines they had discovered.

Soup With Real Body

TOKYO (Reuter) — The severed hands of a mobster killed in a gangland power struggle were used as the base for a Chinese noodle soup at a stall in central Tokyo, police said.

About 50 passers-by are believed to have ordered the dish the day after Shoichi Murakami was killed with kitchen knives by five colleagues on July 5.

Murakami's body was cut into small pieces with a saw and kinves in an effort to avoid identification. His hands were put in the soup to get rid of fingerprints, while the rest of the body was buried on a mountain near the western city of Kobe.

Police said the gang members ordered the soup stall owner to use the hands for the meal and later threw the remaining bones into a rubbish bin.

Five members of the small Tokyo-based gang, the Kaneko Association, were arrested earlier this month on suspicion of manslaughter and abandoning a corpse.

Police said they had been following Muracami for some time on suspicion of involvement in prostitution and drug trafficking before his disappearance.

Two years ago, a member of another gang, the Matsuda-Gumi, ate the cremated ashes of his murdered boss as a ritual show of determination to seek revenge.

Not What It Seems

Conservative leader Joe Clark's latest pitch for votes will be certain to win approval from a huge group of Canadians — all those who are paying mortgages on their own homes, but especially the young people who foresee years of high interest rates and high mortgage payments ahead of them.

Clark's idea of allowing those mortgage payments and also property taxes to be deducted from income in determining income tax would surely save home-buyers a great deal of money — $2,000 a year and up in many cases. For example, a family of four with an income of $20,000 a year paying $5,000 a year in mortgage payments would have their income tax cut nearly in half by Clark's idea. That's certainly enough to turn some undecided voters to the Tory camp.

But despite those benefits to individuals, Clark's idea doesn't really make much sense on the national scene, at least not the way he's explained it so far.

No one has been able to produce a figure that represents the total loss the government would suffer from such a program, but it would surely be substantial. If $2,000 were the average saving and just 500,000 families took advantage of the plan — fewer than one-tenth of Canadian households — the government would lose $1 billion, a staggering sum for a government that is also pledging to reduce significantly the federal deficit.

How does Clark plan to make up the difference? His ideas of eliminating PetroCan and the urban affairs department, sensible though they may be, simply won't come anywhere close to saving this sort of sum, let alone saving it and still cutting down on the operating deficit.

Alternatives might then include raising other taxes to make up the difference or allowing the deficit to continue unchecked at its present level, both steps that might, in the long run, hurt the taxpayer far more than he would be helped by the mortgage plan. A country with a dollar as shaky as Canada's is now cannot afford any action that might weaken its currency further on international markets.

It is to be hoped that Canadians will not succumb to these temptations to be bribed with their own money, no matter how appealing the offer may seem at first glance.

Don't Go It Alone

We wish Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm luck in his efforts to combine all types of social service programs into one guaranteed annual income plan on either a provincial, or, better yet, a federal-provincial basis. Regrettably, it seems he's going to need all the luck he can get.

Social Credit governments from the time of W.A.C. Bennett have talked about the advantages of the guaranteed annual income, have advocated it at federal-provincial conferences, and have even suggested pilot B.C. schemes, but so far all their efforts have come to naught. It seems that the basic reasonableness of the idea just gets lost in the complicated bureaucratic wranglings needed to pull it together.

Vander Zalm is quite right when he says the proliferation of social welfare programs leads to duplication and inefficiency. What really is the sense of having one program for the unemployed, another (three others, really) for those over the age of 65, another for families, another for the handicapped, and still another — ordinary welfare — for everybody else who needs it?

Despite the minister's good intentions it seems unlikely that a program undertaken by the province alone, without federal co-operation, would succeed. Even if Vander Zalm succeeded in bringing all the provincial programs together — come to think of it, wasn't that what GAIN was supposed to do? — they would still be overlapping and duplicating the services provided by the old age pension and its supplement, family allowances and unemployment insurance. It wouldn't be more than half a scheme at best.

From Vander Zalm's point of view, it might be much worse than no scheme at all. If it didn't work well, other provinces and Ottawa might well use it as an example to show why the idea was a bad one, even though the real reason for its failure would have been the lack of federal participation in the first place.

Vander Zalm should continue encouraging his provincial counterparts and the federal government to adopt such a plan on a pilot basis. But he probably would be wise not to go it alone in a pilot project where the idea might lose far more than it would gain.

Borrowing Out of Control

OTTAWA — When a country must adjust its interest rates solely in an attempt to support its currency, even if that action is contrary to all its other economic interests, it has lost control of a vital aspect of its affairs.

When this situation is reached, that critical element of control has passed from domestic hands into those of foreign institutions and individuals. We have reached this point in Canada. Interest rates have been edged upwards four times this year by the Bank of Canada in the course of the unsuccessful effort to stop the decline of the dollar, although it was known that this action must have a deleterious effect on the economy generally.

When a country must repeatedly borrow huge sums of money, at a cost becoming horrendous, to support its currency and other activities it is embarked on an unsustainable course. Canada has been on this course for four years and the momentum behind the borrowings is accelerating at an alarming rate.

The government has already borrowed $3 billion in foreign funds and arranged a further $4 billion in standby credits in its currency support operations. After vast expenditures of this borrowed treasure it is now returning to the New York market to raise a further $750 million. By every sign that can be read, it will be only a few months before it will renew this process, seeking more and more money abroad.

Alarming Degree

Even before the government itself embarked on this currency-support borrowing, Canada was deeply into the foreign capital markets, in part raising funds legitimately for capital investment especially by the two big electric power commissions but, to an alarming degree, to finance current operations.

It literally took years for the Trudeau government to wake up to the dangers of the course that has been followed and it is doubtful if the nation as a whole has yet aroused itself from its slumber.

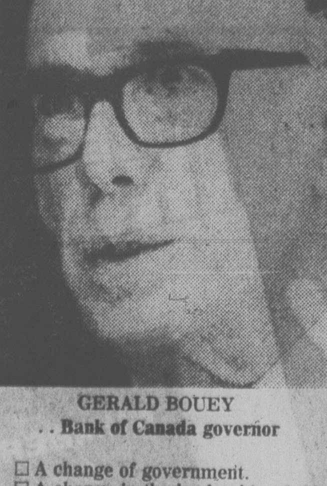
As I have mentioned before in this column, it is only a month or two more than two years since a very senior member of the administration, still a member of the government, asked me what I found so wrong with running a very large international payments deficit and covering it by foreign borrowing. The question was asked because I had been harping on the dangers of the situation that was developing.

This country maintains a surplus on its trade account: exports are running well above imports. It operates a huge deficit, however, on the service account, everything from foreign travel by Canadians, interest and dividend payments, insurance, shipping and so on.

This is so much larger than our trade surplus that we have had very large over-all deficits for years now. The dollar will not be sound again until the international financial community believes that we are bringing things into a better balance. It will not be necessary to achieve actual balance before the dollar strengthens but the trend must be unmistakeable in the eyes of the world.

It is extremely doubtful if we can attain this situation under the present government. Its record provides no grounds for confidence, either at home or abroad, if only for two reasons: much of this has come about through the unrealistic actions of the government itself in the past and because it was so tardy in appreciating the gravity of the problems that were developing. Added to this there is the appalling weakness of the present cabinet. The basis for confidence does not exist.

Any one of three things is vital to the welfare of this country:



GERALD BOUEY
. . Bank of Canada governor

☐ A change of government.

☐ A change in the leadership of this government.

☐ Or the prompt construction of a cabinet that will command confidence through the addition, not of one or two, but of several strong, outstanding men.

Instead, we have witnessed not merely a constant postponement of the election that might aid in changing our circumstances but a fundamental change in the way in which this government is operated. Trudeau has often in the past been accused of attempting to introduce a presidential system of government in Canada. Until this summer, that has always been an unfounded charge. Earlier he changed the cabinet system drastically, and many of us believe adversely, but not in the American direction.

Since the beginning of August, that charge has no longer been unjustified. Trudeau has been operating in a very presidential way. The over-dramatized spending cuts, touted as a new economic approach, were not a cabinet product; they were a presidential product, in which neither ministers nor the most appropriate senior officials played roles of any importance. It has barely been recognized that this was the final condemnation of the changes in the cabinet system Trudeau had introduced earlier. Among his earliest actions as prime minister was the introduction of an elaborate system of decisionmaking cabinet committees which inevitably eroded ministerial responsibility. It slowed decisions but the quality of the actions that followed did not suggest that it improved the judgment. By August, Trudeau evidently had had enough of collegial government and turned his back on it with a vengeance.

So far, everything that has followed has been either of a stopgap nature, such as the new borrowings and the rising interest rates, or of marginal, medium to long-term effect, such as the spending cuts.

So far, neither the prime minister nor his ministers have had the courage to tell the Canadian people how bad the bad parts of our predicament are, even though there is the irony that the other aspects of the economy are sound and encouraging.

Reducing Real Income

It is time for political courage. Someone who commands attention and confidence must be frank with the Canadian people and tell them the truth: that the currency and deficit aspects of our situation are not merely worrying but very dangerous and that there is no possibility whatever of finding a painless way out.

The painful part is that the current level of real incomes in Canada is a byproduct of the way in which inflation has been approached and, because it lacks a sound productive basis, it is too high. The best part of a devaluation as sharp as this one, after the improvement in export prospects, is that it reduces real incomes as long as attempts to inflate away the change are frustrated. So far, given the stability of the rate of wage increases, that is happening.

A case can now be made for ending these costly and ineffective efforts to support the dollar at the present level and let it find its true level which would probably be around 80 cents U.S. That would further increase import costs, although depressing the volume of imports, and in the case of foodstuffs the effect would be significant.

If this were done, it would be essential to pay these higher costs from current income levels, not to resort to inflationary tactics in an attempt to postpone the day of reckoning another year or two.

Dangers of Secrecy Laws

NEW YORK — The American press has been having a bad season in court but if it's any comfort, journalists have even worse troubles in Canada — a nation in which, as I learned during a recent visit, the civil liberties seem to be viewed with somewhat less sensitivity than they are here.

In the United States in recent months, the supreme court has made clear, both in the Stanford daily case and in one involving press access to a California county jail, the Court's emerging view that reporters have no special rights in gathering the news. And a New Jersey judge has fined The New York Times and sent one of its reporters to jail for claiming that under the First Amendment and New Jersey statutes the reporter is not required to turn over his notes to the defense in a criminal trial.

In Canada, the Trudeau government has brought the first prosecution in that country's history of a journalist and a newspaper under the Canadian Official Secrets Act. Peter Worthington, editor of the Toronto Sun, and Douglas Creighton, the Sun's publisher, were charged with breaching the act after the Sun carried an article by Worthington last March 7 in which he quoted a "Top Secret" government document citing numerous specific instances of Soviet espionage against Canada.

Previously Published

Both men could be sentenced to 14 years in prison but that's not necessarily the worst of it. Under the Official Secrets Act, the trial could be held entirely in secret — and parts of a preliminary hearing were. And, as is often the case with "Top Secret" documents in any country, the one in question may not even have been all that secret — or important.

One of the instances cited by Worthington, for example, was the expulsion of a Soviet journalist from Canada after he had allegedly persuaded a Canadian journalist to "act on behalf of Soviet interests." But the government's refusal to permit the Soviet "reporter" to return to Canada after a home leave in Moscow was fully reported in the Canadian press in 1974 — among others, by Peter Worthington himself on Jan. 22, 1974, in the Toronto Sun.

Another item Worthington reported from the "Top Secret" document was that "since 1970, five Canadian corporations have become partners of the Soviets in selling and servicing Soviet goods." But on Nov. 28, 1977, the Regina Leader-Post, in an editorial based on a report in The New York Times, commented on "five Soviet-Canadian joint-equity firms." The original Times report was based on information made public by the C.I.A. — information that still was marked "Top Secret" in Canada in March, 1978.

An opposition member of the Canadian Parliament told me, moreover, that "fifty-odd" copies of the document had been distributed to government offices in Ottawa — a sure prescription for a leak and hardly the way to handle a really "Top Secret" paper. Another opposition M P , Tom Cossitt of Leeds, quoted liberally from the same document on the floor of Parliament well before Mr. Worthington quoted it in print. And five weeks before his March 7 article, a program called "Operation Code Blue" on Canadian television broadcast much of the information in the same document to a national audience.

The (former) federal Minister of Justice, Ronald Basford, has announced that it would not be proper to prosecute Cossitt for his statements in the House of Commons. As for the CTV program, neither Basford nor anyone else has said why no prosecution has resulted — or why the government has not even requested a tape or a transcript of it. A widely held theory is that the decision not to prosecute Cossitt was unpopular with security "hawks" in the Trudeau cabinet and with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and that the Worthington-Creighton prosecution was undertaken as a sort of compromise on the issue.

Ironically, Cossitt, and Worthington both are known as strongly anti-Communist. Worthington received the secret paper in the mail, held it for six months, then published it — he told other reporters — only after Trudeau made statements suggesting, at least to Worthington, that the prime minister did not take the threat of Soviet espionage very seriously.

Worthington said he believed it was more important for the Canadian people to have the information in the document than for him to worry about technical violations of the Official Secrets Act — an argument not unfamiliar to journalists in the United States. But Basford, sounding rather like U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger, contends that "the press is not in a somewhat special position in our society." Journalists, he insists, "are in no different a position than anyone else."

No Special Position

That seems obviously to be the case in Canada. The Canadian Official Secrets Act, for example, prohibits not just the possession of secret documents but the "communication" of any part of such a document. So, conceivably, Peter Worthington — or any reporter — could be tried in secret and sentenced to 14 years in prison for "communicating" material that already had been widely communicated, in other publications, on national television and in the House of Commons.

The real question, in Canada as in the United States, is whether the public is better served by such restrictions on news gathering than it would be by a press free of them. And those in the this country who favor an Official Secrets Act, even though it would surely differ from Canada's, might ponder the difficulties of writing such a statute without raising the spectre of a Worthington case in this country.

Bawling Babes

Many of us are leading lives of quiet desperation during Sunday worship. Will the babies never learn to weep silently over their sins? After agonizing over the matter, I've lined up some suggestions:

Have a Saturday midnight service each week for all babies — blissfully asleep in maternal arms.

Give baby a good breakfast: hunger means holler. Don't overdress your darling so he suffers from the heat. Purgatory can wait.

Let the ushers hand out pacifiers and noiseless toys to all babies under 18 months.

Have babies watch silent films in the basement during Sunday services.

Appoint a Diocesan Royal Commission on the Status of Crying Babies in the Congregation of the Faithful. Publicize the findings.

Get the goverment to raise the baby bonus so parents can afford to leave bawling babe home with a sitter.

Mother and B.B. might take a leisurely stroll around the block during the sermon. B.B. can't understand a word anyhow and he won't let Mom listen in peace.

Disband the choir and turn the choir loft into a nursery by equipping it with a glass front and earphones for mothers.

Learn lip-reading so you can follow the sermon with ears plugged.

If all else fails, give the cryingest baby and his parents a six-month vacation in Hawaii. Somebody down there should take a turn at leading a life of quiet desperation come Sunday morning. — Florence Wedge, 160 Government Street.

U.S. Kamikaze Estimates Very Much on Target

By CHALMERS M. ROBERTS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — There seems to be a rule of thumb that only after a long period, varying from a quarter to a third of a century, is a bloody conflict transformed from an all-consuming current event into a fascinating piece of history. The interval generally is a period of turning away, often of revulsion.

It is now almost a third of a century since the Second World War — the war, to my generation — ended with the atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. And only now is the American government beginning to release some of the most fascinating documents of the Pacific war: the intercepted and decoded Japanese diplomatic and military messages. A Washington Post story the other day offered a tantalizing glimpse at the results of this arcane business.

My own interest is more than passing because I spent the latter part of the war in a windowless room in the Pentagon in that very business, ending up with a War Department citation for having "conceived, organized and maintained a complete file of information on activities at Japanese airfields, as a result of which a thorough and accurate picture of Japanese air activity at individual locations became available for the first time." This sounds much neater after the fact.

The diplomatic intercepts, the glamorous part of the business, were known as "Magic," itself a classified name. I had nothing to do with that traffic (although I had access to it and read it out of intense curiosity); rather, I was struggling with the far more difficult military intercepts. What came into our office, known as Special Branch, the supersecret part of military intelligence, were thousands of already translated intercepts. They were only partially decoded and usually puzzling messages exchanged by various military commands and headquarters in Tokyo.

Tried to Pinpoint

It was out of this melange that we tried to pinpoint the locale and movements, especially those about to occur, of land and air forces. The Japanese Navy was a problem for the U.S. Navy. My own area was Japanese air and, most especially, the Japanese suicide forces known as kamikazes.

As I see it today, there were two great differences between the allied interceptions of German and Japanese coded military messages: The Special Branch people and their British compatriots at a country house outside London had far more complete decodes to work with than did we on the Japanese side, and they were dealing with a military psychology much better and much more widely understood by Anglo-American minds than was the case with us, struggling to interpret the psychology and motivation behind the Japanese messages.

Nothing better illustrates this than the American problem of understanding, and thus being able to counter, the Japanese kamikazes. Somehow, early on, the word became in English "suicide." The Japanese word, however, meant "divine wind," a historical term deriving from a typhoon that prevented a Mongol invasion of Japan in 1570.

In the months immediately following the Pacific War's end, I was in Japan heading a small team of intelligence officers trying to find out how good our intelligence had been on the kamikazes. A Japanese lieutenant general we interrogated, among many officers, made a point of rebutting the American view of those "suicide" units.

That, he said, is "a misnomer, and we feel very badly about your calling them 'suicide' attacks. They were in no sense 'suicide.' The pilot did not start out on his mission with the intention of committing suicide. He looked upon himself as a human bomb that would destroy a certain part of the enemy fleet for his country. They considered it a glorious thing, while a suicide may not be so glorious."

It was evident from our explorations in Japan, chiefly in Kyushu, the westernmost island, where the first American landing had been scheduled (Operation Olympic) for Nov. 1, that kamikaze attacks would have met it.

At war's end, we found, some 790 such planes were on hand, and the army commander told us he figured his total would reach about 1,000. Many were trainers, some lacked gasoline or were fuelled by alcohol, which caused some malfunctioning. How many planes would have been destroyed by the planned softening-up American bombing and consequently how many actually would have gotten into the air in a desperate effort no one will ever know.

But American officers and civilian leaders well remembered the 88-day campaign earlier that year to capture Okinawa during which kamikazes sank 30 vessels and damaged 368 others, including 10 battleships and 13 carriers, in some 850 such "suicide" attacks.

By chance, our intelligence team on that intended D-Day was flying in a light plane over Miyazaki, one of the three planned landing beaches. My notes say that the estimate we got at the time was that there were 56,000 troops dug in nearby with another 70,000 in reserve — in addition to kamikazes and certain navy "suicide" units. We had no doubt it would have been a bloody landing.

From Pentagon

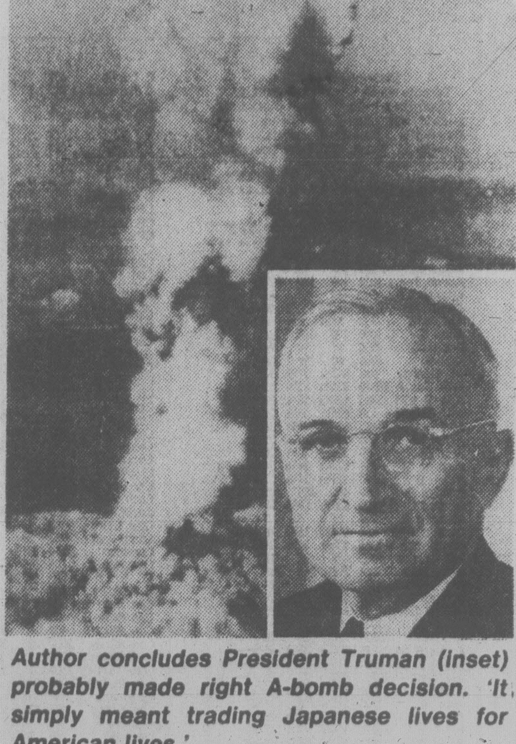
From the bowels of the Pentagon we had sent up in the chain of command our estimates of kamikaze strength, figures very close to what our later intelligence foray concluded were the actual facts. Those estimates in turn worked their way to Gen. George Marshall and thus to President Roosevelt and then to President Truman as part of the military judgments of which FDR sought the Soviet Union's entry into the Pacific war and then on which Truman decided to drop the atomic bomb. I have yet to see published what was the final definitive American estimate of potential casualties for the projected conquest of Japan; Truman later said perhaps 250,000 dead and half a million wounded had been anticipated.

Thus, at the time of the A-bombs and subsequently when we examined the facts in Japan I had no doubt that Truman had made the right decision; it simply meant trading Japanese lives for American lives.

Revisionist historians and others have conjured up numerous theories to impute evil American notives, ranging from a Truman effort to blackmail the Soviet Union and a cold war psychosis to various failures of American morality. It is true that the Japanese were far weaker than we Americans then thought, but it also is true that there was a fanaticism — or xenophobic patriotism, if you will — epitomized by the kamikazes that was halted only by Emperor Hirohito's speech of surrender.

The general who had commanded the kamikazes in both the Philippines and Okinawa expressed his belief that "our spiritual conviction in victory would balance any scientific advantages, and we had no intention of giving up the fight. It seemed to be especially Japanese."

Indeed, it did.



Author concludes President Truman (inset) probably made right A-bomb decision. 'It simply meant trading Japanese lives for American lives.'

Seychelles Leader Stocking Weapons

LONDON — On the night of July 2, a transport chartered by Air Algerie took off from Algiers and landed in the small hours of the morning at Victoria, the village capital of the Seychelles Republic.

On board was an Algerian colonel. He was shepherding 18 tons of small arms for one of the world's tiniest nations. The package, delivered out of sight of all but a few of the 59,226 Seychelles residents, was big enough to provide one able-bodied male in four with an AK-47 Kalashnikov automatic rifle.

The officials who collected the secret shipment, however, almost surely limited the distribution to the new Seychelles Liberation Army, a force estimated at only 100 to 400. There is also a new People's Militia on the archipelago but its devotion to the equally new president, France Albert Rene, is not yet certain.

This incident, related by an unimpeachable source, is one illustration of the remarkable transformation that Rene has effected in what had been one of the most relaxed members of the United Nations. Before Rene seized power, "security" consisted of several score police, armed with night sticks and old rifles safely locked in a shed.

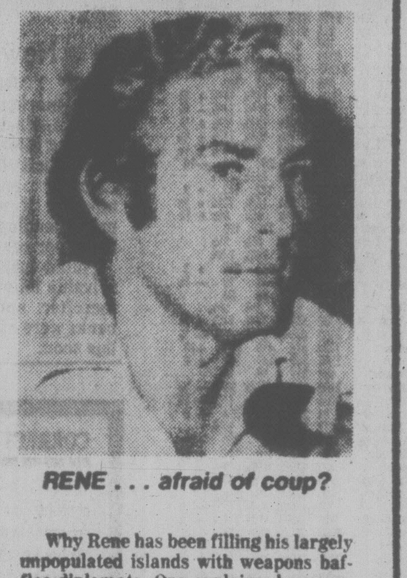
Apart from the tuna that swim around the 86 coral reefs of the Seychelles, the place is economically insignificant. But the islands lie off East Africa in the Indian Ocean and those waters have now become another zone of U.S.-Soviet competition.

For the first year after independence from Britain in 1976, the Seychelles were ruled, largely in absentia, by James Mancham.

While Mancham, a playboy poet, was in London on pleasure and business in June, 1977, Rene, his partner in an elected coalition, took power with 60 armed men. Their guns, supplied from Tanzania, were the first seen by most people there.

Neither London or Washington wants Soviet nuclear submarines using the Seychelles as a base and Rene has tirelessly repeated that this will not happen.

Moreover, both London and Washington do want to keep what the U.S. Air Force describes as a satellite tracking station on the main island of Mahe. Rene did throw out a couple of the station's U.S. civilians last May, claiming they had been plotting with Mancham. But Rene has made clear that the installation can remain.



RENE . . . afraid of coup?

Why Rene has been filling his largely unpopulated islands with weapons baffles diplomats. One explains, however, "he has an obsessive fear of a countercoup by Mancham."

So far, intelligence in London and Washington has detected no evidence that Mancham has made any plans to do to Rene what Rene did to him. The Seychelles' first president lives stylishly here and has more of a reputation for recruiting complaisant women than mercenaries.

While Rene was away in China and North Korea last spring, his ministers claimed they had discovered arms caches for a pro-Mancham coup. They jailed 20 persons without trial, but Rene later freed them.

Rene took power in the name of democracy, claiming Mancham had proposed to him that they agree to put off for five years elections scheduled for 1979. The new president, described as a "pragmatic socialist" by admiring Western diplomats, tore up the constitution, rules by decree and promises to hold those elections based on a new fundamental law. His Seychelles People's United Party is a certain winner.

Rene has tried to take over the archipelago's muddled transport, has promised free schooling for nine years and abolished private schools, and has pledged free medical care.

So far, however, the evidence indicates that he has delivered more guns than social justice.

Fairweather Needs 'Clients'

By PAUL WHITELAW
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — "If I had an executive washroom," says Chief Commissioner of Human Rights Gordon Fairweather, "I'd miss seeing the graffitti. And how would I know what the staff — the men, at least — think about me?"

He smiles as he tells of a visit from a Public Works official shortly after being appointed one year ago as the federal government's first anti-discrimination watchdog. Fairweather was being asked his personal preferences about office facilities.

It seems only fitting that the man whose job is championing the underdog turned down the offer of a private toilet, one of the perks of a position carrying the equivalent of deputy minister rank and a salary in the $51,900-$67,700 range.

Fairweather left behind a small Parliament Hill office and 15 years as Conservative MP for the New Brunswick riding of Fundy-Royal to head the new Canadian Human Rights Commission, which began accepting public complaints last Mar. 1.

As chief commissioner, the 55-year-old lawyer is charged with safeguarding the rights of Canadians and landed immigrants in their dealings with federal departments, agencies, and Crown corporations, as well as businesses under Ottawa's jurisdiction, such as banks, airlines and railways.

He administers the Canadian Human Rights Act, which outlaws discrimination based nine broad categories: race, national or ethnic origin, color, religion, age, sex, marital status, the fact a person has been convicted of a criminal offence for which a pardon has later been issued, or a physical handicap.

To date, "we've received about 1,500 complaints," Fairweather says, admitting the number of people turning to the commission for help has been less than expected.

The chief commissioner believes the newness of the anti-discrimination body means many people do not yet realize they have recourse to it.

The commission is now in the process of filling permanent positions in regional offices in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Although the number of requests has been small, Fairweather hopes the commission — through its system of investigation, arbitration and tribunals — will establish a body of precedents that will affect the lives of thousands of Canadians and landed immigrants.

The commission doesn't have to wait for a complaint to become involved in an issue, and Fairweather says a top priority will be pressuring the government and private, federally-regulated businesses to pay women the same wages as men for equivalent work.

The commission's profile is certain to get higher in the next few months when it will do battle with the Canadian Armed Forces unless the military brass agrees to accept women for training as combat pilots.

Fairweather notes that the armed forces, at the commission's request, is reviewing its policy about women flyers.

The agency will try to dispose of complaints, when feasible, by establishing precedents that will have broad application.

Nonetheless, the commission would be a failure if it failed to act as the champion of the so-called little guy, and has gone to bat, successfully, for a number of individuals.

So far, the commission has relied on conciliation. But it is empowered to set up tribunals whose decisions are binding and which can impose a fine of up to $50,000 if the accused is an employer or employee organization. In any other case, the maximum fine is $5,000.

The commission may also order that compensation be paid for wages lost, expenses incurred, or for damage to a victim's feelings or self-respect.

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market reversed an earlier gain to drop more than a point in active mid-session trading.

Trading resumed at 1 p.m. in shares of IAC Ltd. and Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. following news that the two companies have been discussing a possible amalgamation with Continental Bank. IAC last traded at $21 a share and Canada Permanent at $19.

Trading halts continued in shares of Provigo Inc., M. Loeb Ltd., Horne and Pitfield Foods Ltd. and Burns Foods Ltd. pending announcements. Provigo holds an 80-per-cent interest in Loeb, which has 85.5-per-cent control of Horne and Pitfield.

Provigo last traded at $19 a share, Loeb at $7½, Horne and Pitfield at $13½ and Burns Foods at 15¾ a share.

Among other industrials, Fraser Cos. A climbed 3½ to $41½ on the sale of 1,466 shares, Brinco ¾ to $7, Consumers Glass ¾ to $21¾, Nu-West Development A ¾ to $19 and Asbestos Corp. ⅝ to $46¾.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower again against a background of rising interest rates.

The First National Bank of Chicago announced this morning it was raising its prime lending rate from 9½ to 9¾ per cent.

Philadelphia's First Pennsylvania followed suit shortly therefter, and other leading banks were expected to fall in line soon.

It marked the third increase in less than a month in the basic charge on blue-chip loans.

Meanwhile, analysts said the Federal Reserve seemed to be exerting more upward pressure on the open-market money rates upon which banks base their prime rates.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today, with the 85-stock composite index down 0.08 at 212.95.

Volume at 2 p.m. EDT was 197,368 shares traded, compared with 567,298 shares traded up 2:30 p.m. Friday.

CP Ltd. was up ⅛ at $23¼ and Pacific Petroleum ¾ at $40½, while Inco A was off ⅜ at $19⅜ and Carling O'Keefe 10 cents at $4.35.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices dropped sharply near the close of light trading Monday on the London stock market in response to the continued Ford Motor Co. strike.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 509.4, off 9.2.

Leading industrials moved lower, while gold shares rose narrowly.

Canadian issues were mixed.

Parents to Have Say on French

VANCOUVER (CP) — The man in charge of implementing a French core curriculum program for British Columbia's francophone students and French immersion programs for anglophone children says parental guidance will be paramount in establishing the programs.

Nick Ardanaz, who began his $31,000-a-year job with the ministry of education Sept. 5, said in an interview he does not expect to face a situation similar to the dispute this year at Sir William Osler elementary school in Vancouver, where parents protested a plan to establish a French immersion program.

Ardanaz said that within two years, there will be 100 to 120 classrooms around B.C. where francophone students will be taught the core curriculum in their own language. The education ministry is committed to having the program set up by the fall of 1979 in school districts where there is parental demand.

There will be sufficient numbers of teachers to run French immersion programs in B.C., Ardanaz said, adding that he hopes there will be enough qualified teachers in the province for the core curriculum program.

The ministry and B.C. universities will have to make sure that B.C. has enough qualified teachers for these programs and the universities are already taking action to improve teacher training, he said.

Ardanaz was hired to implement minority language programs, which are part of an agreement among Canada's 10 provinces. At the time he was hired, he was co-ordinator of second language instruction in a suburban Montreal school district.

In addition to setting up the two French-language programs, Ardanaz said he will be involved with B.C.'s ethnic groups, helping them preserve their native languages. The federal government is spending $15 million on language programs for people outside Canada's two dominant language groups, and B.C. is not using its share of this money, he said.

"If you lose your language, you lose your culture," he said. "When I look at the tremendous richness of our ethnic groups, I find it very exciting."

Funding for French-language programs will depend on the number of students involved, Ardanaz said.

French-language immersion for anglophone students will be set up where there is enough demand to fill at least one classroom, he said. At present, there are 2,000 people involved in French-language immersion programs, and Ardanaz said the size of the programs vary in each school district. In Richmond there are five immersion classes, but in West Vancouver there is only one, he said.

Ardanaz said 20 minutes a day in French class will not teach anglophone students how to speak French.

"Immersion is the answer," he said.

Binding 3rd Party Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — The union representing workers on strike at Pacific Northern Gas agreed Friday to submit the 18-week-old dispute to a third party for a binding settlement, but the company turned down the chance.

Rick Dowling of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 213, said it was the first case of which he had heard in which a union agreed to a binding industrial inquiry commissioner while the company rejected the idea.

The ministry of labor offered to send in a commissioner to settle a first contract in the strike by 39 workers.

"We were very reluctant to go this route," Dowling said. "Usually unions are opposed to having something pushed down their throat. After a couple of days of talking about it, we did agree as a last resort."

The company had earlier rejected three union requests for an industrial inquiry commissioner in a non-binding role, he said.

Company spokesman Bob O'Shaughnessy said the company wants a union security clause settled before submitting the dispute to a binding third party.

Pacific Northern Gas is a subsidiary of Westcoast Transmission.

Dowling said he is concerned that with the approach of winter, the company's gas pipeline between Prince George and Prince Rupert is not being checked regularly.

Methadone A Pain Killer

FAIRMONT HOT SPRINGS (CP) — Specialists from the University of Washington pain clinic say the best drug treatment for chronic pain sufferers is the restricted narcotic methadone.

Speaking at a scientific meeting of British Columbia family physicians, they urged doctors to press for legal changes that would allow them to use it to relieve intractable pain.

Methadone now is a controlled drug used only in clinics for the maintenance of heroin addicts, but Dr. Terrence Murphy said it is also ideal as a pain-killer. It can be taken orally, is cheap, long-acting and produces only a slight euphoria, he said.

Making methadone available to family doctors would not contribute to drug abuse, he said, pointing out that addicts would fake chronic pain to get the drug, just as they do now.

"But better methadone than Percodan or Demerol or Valium," he said.

The first two drugs are highly-addictive narcotics.

Murphy and Dr. Ed Charlton, an anesthesiologist at the Seattle clinic, said they use a methadone cocktail to cure patients of damaging drug addiction and to control their pain.

Patients are admitted to hospital and for two days are given free access to all the narcotics they want to control their pain, the doctors explained. Then a cherry-flavored syrup is made up containing the methadone equivalent of all the drugs taken by the patients.

The syrup is given every six hours and the amount of methadone is gradually cut down, but the painkilling effect never disappears because the methadone is so long-acting, they said.

Second Language Leader

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of Texas expert on language education says that Canada is far ahead of the United States in second-language education.

"The prevailing opinion in our country is that foreign languages are foreign, that they're a nuisance," Theodore Andersson told delegates attending a conference sponsored by the British Columbia Association for Childhood Education.

He said non-English speakers in the U.S. are taught English, but they lose their native languages in the process.

Andersson also said research shows that children can begin learning to read as early as six months after birth. At about the same time as they begin to speak, he said, children begin to learn reading skills by looking at television commercials, road signs and labels on cans.

"Children themselves signal when they are ready to start reading," he said. "Parents must be sensitive to these signals."

Although some parents start teaching basic reading skills as early as six months, he said, most parents should start teaching such skills when children are between 18 months and two years old.

Oil Spill Cleaners Put through the Hoops

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cleanup crews battled valiantly in Burrard Inlet Friday to clean up a spill of hula hoops.

The 16 hoops, covered in bright orange nylon webbing, were put there by Burrard Clean, an oil spill co-operative comprising six major oil companies in the Vancouver area.

The hoops were part of an exercise designed to test how efficiently Burrard Clean's crew could clean up an oil spill. The hoops represented the 2,000 gallons of diesel oil spilled when a freighter rammed an oil barge.

The hoops were used because they behave much like an oil slick does when moved by tide, wind and current.

According to the plan, the accident occurred when an inbound dry cargo freighter collided with an outbound, fully-loaded barge carrying 400,000 gallons each of gasoline and diesel oil and 200,000 gallons of jet fuel near the Indian Arm-Burrard Inlet intersection.

Fifty minutes after the "accident", said Burrard Clean manager Martyn Green, the first boom boats and many of the 20 members of the cleanup crew and the 30 contractor representatives had arrived.

Green said that none of the crew members or the contractors knew what time they would be called.

The 20-member crew was made up of people from Shell, Imperial, Gulf, Chevron, Texaco and Transmountain Pipelines. Normally, the company responsible for the spill would dispatch its own crew.

The crew worked to get a polyethylene boom around the slick, eventually straightening it to ensure the "oil" would not float towards shore. The boom was wrapped around the slick and then the skimmer came in to eat up the oil.

Green said the co-operative is pleased with the way the exercise went, although there are one or two minor improvements to be made, including stepping up air surveillance and improving communications with the air.

The entire cleanup took about two hours, he said. Once the oil has been contained, the skimmers can gobble up about 200 to 250 gallons of oil a minute, Green said.

Vickers Gets Destroyer Job

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal supply and services department has awarded a $19.9 million contract to Canadian Vickers Ltd. of Montreal to repair and modernize equipment on four helicopter-carrying destroyers.

A department statement said the contract will probably end up costing $26.5 million extra when labor and material costs are added on.

The four ships are Annapolis, Assiniboine, Saguenay and Margaree.

Tentative Waterfront Agreement

VANCOUVER (CP) — Striking waterfront workers were to meet within several days to vote on a tentative agreement reached Saturday with the National Harbors Board (NHB), says a board spokesman.

Jack Barratt said the agreement followed extensive talks with the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, which represents striking clerical and maintenance workers.

There were no details released on the tentative agreement. A union spokesman was unavailable for comment.

The 136 workers struck Aug. 27 to seek parity with waterfront workers employed by private companies.

Picketing was confined to NHB board offices and maintenance sheds, except for a brief attempt by workers Sept. 5 to halt the flow of goods at three NHB cargo container facilities.

Planes Collide, All Killed

"There were bodies lying everywhere," said Barry Fitzsimmons, a photographer for the San Diego Evening Tribune who was one of the first to arrive at the scene. "A block of homes was on fire. It was horrible. The only thing you could see of the plane was a PSA engine. All the other wreckage appeared to level the whole block."

Residents of the neighborhood were said to be mostly elderly persons.

A U.S. Navy flight surgeon who saw the collision said: "They hit head-on. It was unbelievable." After the crash, he said, the 727 went into a tailspin, "what we call a graveyard spin in the navy with the other plane trailing after it."

One of the ground victims was identified by her brother as Darlene Watkins. The brother, Sam Rush, said a piece of the fiery debris from the jet apparently fell onto her home.

"My sister's lying there burned to death," he said, sobbing. "She's all busted up and everything."

At least 20 ambulances lined along 33rd street, the nearest street to where the jet fell.

PSA said the plane was its Flight 182 which left Sacramento at 7:20 a.m. and made a stop in Los Angeles. It had 126 passengers and a crew of seven aboard.

A command centre and temporary morgue was set up at St. Augustine's High School, several blocks away.

Rev. James Clifford, a teacher at St. Augustine's, said: "I was standing in the patio talking to two other teachers and looking up in the sky. I saw the 727 and the Cessna. The small plane looked like it was ascending slightly at the same time the 727 was descending for its approach.

"Right then I said, 'they look too close'. The next thing they hit and exploded into a ball of fire."

He said the PSA jet "appeared to bank around and downward and then it crashed.

"At first, it looked like it was coming right at the school. I yelled for everyone to get out and run because it was coming right for us."

After the crash, Clifford said, "I got into a car with a Baptist minister and we administered general absolution after we got to the scene. There were bodies and parts of bodies everywhere. Everything was in flames."

Peace Accords To Knesset

own conservative Likud Party.

Meanwhile, U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance returned home today, conceding that his five-day Mideast trip produced no tangible results in President Carter's bid to gain Arab support for the peace accords.

The assessment was a far cry from the ringing send-off he received from Carter, who told a cheering joint session of Congress last week that he was sending Vance to Arab leaders "to secure their support for the realization of the new hopes and dreams of the people of the Middle East."

Vance, who visited the heads of state in Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Syria, now must report back to Carter that it is not going to be so easy to sell the Camp David accords.

Vance's final stop was in Damascus Sunday, where he met for four hours with Syrian President Hafez Assad. Afterwards, a senior U.S. official, who declined to be identified, said the talks gave no encouragement that Assad will change his views.

Assad, a leader in the so-called Rejectionist Front, has described the agreements "treasonous" because they do not guarantee complete Israeli withdrawal from territories occupied in 1967.

Assad is scheduled to arrive in Amman early this week for talks with King Hussein on the accords and Hussein will go to key Arab capitals for similar discussions.

The Battle Of Minnie Mountain

Perhaps it's symbolically appropriate that Wednesday's public hearing on a major development proposal for Saanich should be held in a gymnasium, because the evening will be a heavyweight match with plenty at stake.

For the development company, Broadmead Farms Ltd., the potential profit is large.

The firm wants to build a large subdivision on the 72-acre Minnie Mountain property between Telegraph Bay Road and Bedford Road.

But most residents of the Cadboro Bay area apparently view the occasion as a fight to preserve the semi-rural lifestyle they now enjoy.

Between the contestants as referee will be the nine civic sages of Saanich council.

The hearing is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the gymnasium of the Cadboro Bay United Church, 2625 Arbutus Road.

To set the stage, the Times attempts here to summarize the principal arguments of both groups.

Broadmead: A Stout Reputation

By PAUL MOSS, Times Staff

Broadmead Farms Ltd. can be truthfully described as having a stout reputation and a stout financial base.

As the firm responsible for the exclusive, sensitively designed Broadmead subdivision in the Royal Oak area (a sort of rural Uplands, but less antiseptic and with more trees), it has been cited by planners and elected officials as an exemplary developer.

And it's not exactly on a shaky financial footing, having been purchased in 1972 by the Guinness family, makers of the famous British brew and for many years heavily involved in B.C. real estate development.

To quote the parent group's advertising slogan, Broadmead is now attempting once again to convince all concerned in Saanich that Guinness is good for you.

In the introduction to its application for a land-use contract, the firm says its development philosophy has always been to stress such aims as respect for the land, protection of the environment and the creation of homes which will be of lasting value to the community.

"In a fast-paced world, we are prepared to be accepted as a bit old-fashioned about some things. We prefer to approach a project thoughtfully; doing it slowly but doing it properly."

The result of this slow approach to Minnie Mountain over the past four years is a proposal to build 210 units of mixed housing consisting of 77 single-family homes on large lots, 62 townhouses and 71 condominium units contained in four four-storey buildings.

Broadmead notes the density of 2.9 units per acre is less than the density of at least two nearby residential areas.

And Merv Mawson, the firm's vice-president in charge of operations, said in an interview the density is almost half that found on single-family subdivisions in the Gordon Head area.

MAWSON
. . . lower density

The developers claim that their mixed-density approach using a variety of housing types and cluster formats allows them to set aside a far higher proportion of land for recreational use than would be the case under a traditional single-family subdivision pattern.

They say their scheme envisages 17.9 acres of recreation land for community enjoyment, including all of the waterfrontage, 14.5 acres of open area and virtually all the prime viewpoints within the triangular-shaped site.

In addition, they plan to build more than three miles of walking paths, lookout points and two public tennis courts.

Mawson pointed out that the open space provided amounts to 24 per cent of the total site area.

Broadmead's submission is careful to stress that the 77 single-family homes will be built adjacent to existing residential development in the Ten Mile Point area, acting as a visual and environmental buffer between the latter and the proposed townhouses and condominiums.

This higher density development will be located in "areas that are not environmentally sensitive," such as former rock quarry sites, it explains.

Mawson said the attached townhouses will be blended into the topography and tree cover in such a way that they'll look more like a series of single-family homes than conventional townhouses.

As for the four-storey condominium blocks, he added, they won't be visible from anywhere except the water.

Among other positive factors, Broadmead says the development would:

—Produce a net tax dollar yield to Saanich of at least $175,000 a year. (Mawson says this is an ultra-conservative estimate, made before the recent assessment legislation changes, and his guess would place municipal revenue closer to $250,000);

—Enhance the value of neighboring residential properties;

—"Provide an acceptable alternate lifestyle for area residents who may wish to change into a smaller home but not leave the community."

Residents: A Change in Lifestyle

Spokesmen for the Cadboro Bay Residents Association, which has mounted strong opposition to the proposed Broadmead Farms development on Minnie Mountain, say the the group is not anti-development and definitely not anti-Broadmead.

The residents admire what the developers have done with their tasteful subdivision at Royal Oak and would welcome them to their neighborhood — if the intention was merely to build another development of high-quality single-family homes.

But erstwhile fans become vocal opponents over the central issue of Broadmead's intention to introduce townhouses and condominiums into what has been traditionally and exclusively a single-family residential area.

What this proposal involves, according to association president Richard Boss, is essentially a change in lifestyle.

"Broadmead wants to change the zoning to create a different style of housing — which really is an urban style of housing," he said. "But Ten Mile Point and Cadboro Bay have always had a semi-rural style of housing and we want to keep it that way.

"We see this development as a change in our style of living."

In the longer term, the association fears that if the Broadmead development becomes a reality it will prove a fateful precedent. Future councils might approve other, perhaps less sensitive, developments and in time the once-tranquil area would be irrevocably altered.

Under a mixed-density approach which Broadmead says makes good planning, economic and environmental sense, Saanich council is being asked to approve a 210-unit housing scheme for the Minnie Mountain site.

The CBRA calculates that a maximum of 130 units would be possible if the developers built under the present single-family zoning. Therefore, it argues, Broadmead is seeking to exceed the present limits by 60 per cent on a straight unit count.

But Boss concedes that whether the property is developed to single-family pattern or the higher density proposed by Broadmead, the actual number of residents is likely to be about the same — 550 to 600.

On the company's claim that the Minnie Mountain project would yield a minimum of $175,000 in tax revenue, Boss noted that as there are about 25,000 homes in Saanich, the gain works out to roughly $7 per home.

"The residents of Cadboro Bay feel that $7 a year is not justification enough to rezone this land," he added.

Another association spokesman, executive member Ken Smyth, is not overly impressed with Broadmead's donation of 17.9 acres of land for recreational purposes.

For one thing, he said, this figure includes about 3½ acres of so-called "expanded road allowance" (for treed walkways); for another, most of the land in question is so steeply sloped as to be unsuitable for development.

"It's not developable in the usual meaning of the term — unless one uses special, expensive construction techniques as in Hong Kong, for example," Smyth said.

"The few times I have walked in these areas it was more like going for a climb."

Boss said the municipal planners apparently believe that mixed-density housing is sociologically desirable. But he said the Broadmead plan won't provide anything new in this respect, because the Cadboro Bay area already has a wide variety of houses ranging from older, modestly-priced homes to large, expensive homes on large lots.

Both Boss and Smyth challenged the developers' references to providing alternative accommodation for present residents who might wish to move out of large homes into townhouses or condominiums.

They pointed out that the purchase price of around $145,000 for a townhouse unit or $120,000 for a condominium apartment pins them firmly in the luxury bracket, probably well beyond the financial reach of the majority of Cadboro Bay residents.

Push for 11% Mortgage

There are pressures forcing the mortgage interest rate towards 11 per cent but so far they have been resisted, Royal Trust Victoria manager Alan Aldous said on the weekend.

There would be "strong consumer resistance" to 11 per cent mortgage rates and everyone wants to avoid another increase, he said in an interview.

Rates have been forced up from 10.25 per cent to 10.75 per cent over the summer, in response to rate increases by the Bank of Canada.

Another round of rate increases may be in the offing in Canada following a decision Friday by the U.S. federal reserve board to increase its rates to 8 per cent from 7.75 per cent.

Canadian rates usually rise parallel with American increases in order to attract foreign investment here.

Aldous said it is significant Ottawa has indicated it wants to hold the line on interest rates this fall, at least until the Canada Savings Bond issue is sold by mid-November.

"Whether the rates can be held remains to be seen. There are upward pressures.

Aldous said that while interest rates have gone as high as 12.25 per cent in Victoria, consumers are not in a mood to pay high rates at this time.

The rates of 11 to 12.25 per cent were prevalent during a real estate market boom when buyers felt they could afford high interest payments because the house they bought would increase in value by $3,000 or $4,000 a year.

WARM AND GRITTY

The whirlpool at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre was out of operation for about eight hours on the weekend but was expected to be back in use again by noon today.

The culprit was a breakage in the filter system that allowed part of the bed of sand through which the water filters to get into the water line.

Duncan Russell, supervisor of parks and recreation, said neither of the centre's other two pools were affected because the three pools are on separate filter systems.

Welfare Pickup

Social assistance cheques will be available Thursday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at local offices, a provincial human resources ministry spokesman said today.

Recipients have been asked to pick up the cheques because of disruptions in mail service caused by the letter carriers' rotating strikes.

Recipients should phone the closest district office first

District offices are at: 1820 Blanshard, 1318 Esquimalt Road, 1520 Fairfield, 2002 Fernwood, 3750 Shelbourne, 85 West Burnside, 965 Alston, and 435 Simcoe.

Other district offices are: Langford, 2820 Bryn Maur; Oak Bay, 1627 Fort; Saanich, 780 Vernon; Sidney, 9790-2nd Street, and Sooke, 6750 West Coast Road.

On-the-Spot Firing Halted Marguerite

An on-the-spot firing of an engine room worker on Saturday delayed the Victoria-Seattle sailing of the provincial government's Princess Marguerite, forcing 600 passengers to make the return trip by the Black Ball's MV Coho or the Washington State ferry Evergreen State.

Tiny Himes, headquarters representative of the Seafarers' International Union in Vancouver, said today the man was dismissed after refusing to carry out an order without the supervision of an engineer.

He said the union members did not threaten to walk off the job but would not carry on until the matter was resolved.

He said they resented their co-worker being summarily dismissed after he had been crewing on the Marguerite for at least two years. Himes said the refusal to carry out the assignment without supervision was made in the interest of safety.

The man was reinstated after meetings with the ship's master, chief engineer and other officials, and the Marguerite sailed empty at 7:15 Saturday evening.

She was back on her normal runs Sunday and today although fog in Puget Sound delayed Sunday's runs by half an hour.

Officials of the B.C. Steamship Company, which operates the vessel, could not be reached for comment. They were aboard the Marguerite on her run from Seattle to Victoria this morning.

The company covered the cost of bus and ferry service for the passengers travelling to Seattle.

Due to the confusion at sailing time, some passengers may have made their own way back and will be reimbursed on submission of claims, a spokesman said.

MAN STABBED

Gerald Joseph McIvor, 30, of Victoria is in Victoria General Hospital with stab wounds to the chest and stomach following a fight at 3 a.m. Sunday on Broad Street.

City police said a man in his 20s has been charged with assault with intent to wound and will appear in provincial court today.

Insp. Angus Stewart said four or five persons, including a woman, were having an argument that led to a struggle. One of the participants apparently was being throttled when the knife was pulled, Stewart said.

McIvor is in good condition in hospitaL.

Seymours: Kingpin of Tidal Passes

WHEN I WAS A BOY working in the woods 12 miles or more inland from Menzies Bay, I used to be puzzled by a low, continuous muttering too deep for wind in the trees. Finally I asked an old logger what the sound might be.

"That's the tide," he told me. "A big tide booming through the Seymours."

Like all oldtimers, he pluralized the narrows that run between Quadra Island and the Vancouver Island main.

He also spoke of the Seymours with respect bordering on awe.

Of all the many tidal passes that thread the island archipelago of the British Columbia coast, this is the mightiest. True, there is at least one saltwater rapids — the Nakwakto draining out of and into Slingsby Channel — that belts along at a more furious pace. Sectionally, the Yuculta and the Skookum Chuck may be more spectacular. But there is none that gives such a sense of power unleashed . . . of destructive and hostile forces at work . . . as Seymour Narrows.

I first went through the Seymours on a little steamer that served the Upcoast. In those years, Ripple Rock still reared its underwater pinnacle in the gateway, its position marked by a set of tall standing waves.

The steamer shuddered, rolled and twisted in the grip of currents still strong even though slack water was near. It was a tense experience; not until we were through the narrows and straightening away for the north did I relax my grip on the rail.

Ripple Rock is no longer a horrendous threat to navigation. In a masterly engineering feat that involved tunnelling out from Maude Island and planting a vast tonnage of explosives, the federal authority blew its ship-killing peaks to smithereens. Even so, the Seymours with its 14-knot tide — which runs considerably faster in the surges — remains a force to be reckoned with by mariners.

Since that first steamer junket, I have been into the Seymours in a variety of craft. Familiarity has never bred contempt. I'm still taut as a fiddle-string when we enter, and mightily relieved when we put the narrows astern. I agree with one of Captain Vancouver's intrepid officers who, from a ship's boat under oars, described the pass as the most nightmarish marine spectacle his eyes had ever beheld.

You can get a view of sorts of the Seymours from a blacktopped turn-in off the Island Highway a few miles north of Campbell River. But impressive though this prospect sometimes is, distance robs the scene of its majesty and terror.

Where fish are, there you will find fishermen. Fortunately, or perhaps unfortunately, the salmon fishing is often good in the narrows. A daring and knowledgeable boatman can flirt with the Seymours and get away with it. A number of guides routinely take parties in and bring them safe out with good catches.

Inevitably, though, fools rush in. They tamper with waters where even large and heavy seiners come to grief, and each year, the Seymours exact a mortal price. If it weren't for those same guides I mentioned, the price would be higher.

Routinely, though with sulphurous remarks about jerks who brave the narrows in putter-boats without even a lifejacket to buoy them, they yank greenhorns from their swamped or overset boats to safety.

Last year, a friend of mine was waiting for tide in a Maude Island niche when he looked out to see an old man and a small boy afloat in a 12-foot skiff on a deceptively smooth slick.

They were daring the tiger, but they remained serenely unaware of that fact.

My friend hollered and waved, urgently flagging them toward shore. His efforts got him only an uncomprehending stare.

"It was a question of which would get them first," he said later, "a boil or a whirlpool."

In a matter of seconds, the waters parted beneath them, and their little boat was sucked under. By a miracle, the whirl spat them out, to be plucked from a watery hell.

Granddad, dripping in his rescuer's boat, was both aggrieved and indignant.

"My neighbor told me it was perfectly safe in here," he protested.

Meanwhile, I see by the local paper that the Seymours are still up to their evil tricks. Another large and sturdy seiner capsized, at the cost of yet another life.

Bombers Put Dent In Lions' Chances

Times News Services

Ralph Brock threw four touchdown passes to lift the Winnipeg Blue Bombers to 32-25 Canadian Football League victory over British Columbia Lions at Winnipeg Sunday and put a serious crimp in the Lions' playoff hopes.

Brock's throwing rallied the Bombers from a disastrous first quarter in which Winnipeg ran only eight offensive plays—three of those were punts—and failed to get a first down.

The Lions, despite total domination in the first quarter, managed only three field goals by Lui Passaglia.

British Columbia controlled most of the second quarter, but again the best they could do was three field goals. The Lions did get a touchdown in the fourth quarter when Al Charuk caught a 10-yard Jerry Tagge pass.

Passaglia's convert made the score 31-25 but that was the only scoring the Lion's managed in the second half.

Mike Holmes and rookie Joe Poplawski each caught two touchdown pases for Winnipeg.

Bernie Ruoff converted all four and booted singles from 63, 52, 85 and 72 yards. Passaglia's field goals were kicked between the 19 and 44 yard line.

British Columbia's inability to score touchdowns prevented them from all but wrapping up a win in the first half. Tagge directed them on some impressive and lengthy marches but each time they got into touchdown territoy they turned cold.

"We should have had some touchdowns but all we got were six field goals . . . that was disappointing," said Lions' coach Vic Rapp. "But there were some plusses for us. Jerry threw the ball better."

Lions led 9-2 after the first quarter and 18-16 at the half but the tide had turned in Winnipeg's favor before the second quarter ended.

Excellent ball control by Winnipeg allowed them to control the third quarter when the Lions had the advantage of a stiff breeze. So effective were the Bombers they regained the lead, 23-18, while keeping B.C. scoreless.

Their touchdown came when Brock moved the club 81 yards on three plays and with the help of two B.C. penalties. Poplawski ended the drive with a 10-yard scoring reception.

Winnipeg struck quickly early in the fourth quarter when they got the wind at their backs. Poplawski finished up a four play, 60-yard drive by outmuscling Joe Fourqurean for Brock's 44-yard pass as they crossed the goal line.

Ruoff's convert and 85-yard singles on the kickoff put Winnipeg ahead 30-18 and allowed them to survive B.C.'s only touchown later in the quarter.

The Lions had a net offence of 495 yards, 430 of that through the air as Tagge hit on 34 of 49 pass attempts.

In other Sunday games, Calgary Stampeders and Edmonton Eskimos played to a 20-20 tie and Ottawa Rough Riders humiliated Saskatchewan Roughriders 53-18. On Saturday in Hamilton, the Tiger-Cats upset the injury-riddled Alouettes 17-6.

The Calgary-Edmonton tie was Calgary's third in 10 games. Its last meeting with the Eskimos also ended in a tie, a 28-28 affair Sept. 4. The other tie occurred in July, 19-19 against the Lions.

Dave Cutler salvaged the point for Edmonton with a 20-yard field goal with 55 seconds to play.

Cyril McFall kicked four field goals for the Stamps while Willie Burden scored the teams lone touchdown.

Defensive end Mike Fanucci scored a touchdown for Ottawa Rough Riders, his first since high school as Ottawa padded its first-place lead to four points over Montreal and Saskatchewan cemented itself in the Western Cellar.

Fanucci's major was one of three by the alert Ottawa defence, a total matched by tight end Tony Gabriel.

Oddly enough the game was close for a while with Ottawa holding a 17-15 edge at the half. Saskatchewan went ahead 18-17 at 5:33 of the third quarter and then the roof fell in.

Jimmy Edwards scored two touchdowns to lead Hamilton to its victory on Saturday. Don Sweet's field goal and Wally Buono's singles accounted for the Montreal points.

New Players Put Canucks In Best Light

Vancouver Canucks have a new coach and new colors but it may be the new blood that could be the most telling factor in the team's bid to attain National Hockey League respectability.

Harry Neale, the new coach, really hasn't had much of a chance to make his contribution noticeable.

The effect of the new colors, a high-priced psychological ploy, won't be known until later. Canucks' new orange-yellow-black uniforms haven't arrived and the old blue-green-white ones have to do for a few more days.

But the new blood was evident at the weekend as the Canucks opened their exhibition schedule with a pair of victories over the Los Angeles Kings.

Victoria Cougar graduate Curt Fraser turned things around with a goal and a well-deserved assist as the Canucks scored a 4-3 victory before a standing-room crowd of 5,245 at Memorial Arena Saturday night.

The Canucks then overcame a 2-1 first-period deficit to defeat the Kings 4-2 Sunday night before 10,300 fans in Vancouver's PNE Coliseum.

In both games, rookies contributed prominently.

"Don't tell 'em because I don't want Vancouver to get out of our reach," said LA manager George Maguire, "but I think they're heading in the right direction. Canucks have to go with the future—the rookies."

Sunday, rookies Tom Gradin and Bill Derlago scored along with Dennis Ververgaert and Ron Sedlebauer as Vancouver made it two straight. Veteran Marcel Dionne scored both Los Angeles goals in a 50-second span to give Kings a 2-1 lead before the game was 14 minutes old.

While Derlago, via Brandon Wheat Kings, was Vancouver's top amateur draft pick, Gradin appears to be one of the brightest of the Vancouver newcomers.

A 22-year-old centre and one of four Swedish players bidding for regular spots with the Canucks, Gradin also scored Saturday night. An excellent skater, he showed good puck savy and played with considerable finesse in both games.

He was selected the game's star Sunday.

The hustle of New Westminster Bruin graduate Stan Smyl also impressed Neale, as did Derlago and Fraser. Derlago did not play Saturday in Victoria.

Rob Flockhart, still a rookie by NHL standards, and veteran Hilliard Graves scored Vancouver's other goals Saturday.

Canucks came up with a territorial edge in both games, out-shooting LA 37-31 Saturday and 34-23 Sunday.

And in both games, some of Vancouver's veterans may have got a not-so-funny message: The future could be moving in and they could be moving out.

Vancouver's success was tempered by the loss of Rick Blight. Another Brandon graduate and heading into his third season, Blight suffered torn knee ligaments when checked by Graves in an intra-squad game at Courtenay.

French Side Plays B.C. on Tuesday

CALGARY (CP) — The national rugby sides of France and Canada will meet here for the first time on Sept. 30 and the Frenchmen are looking to this matchup as the sternest test of their current tour.

They are unbeaten in four exhibition matches in the Far East, including such enormous scores of 61-10 and 91-11 against less-experienced Japanese teams.

They get their first Canadian test against British Columbia, Canadian champion the last three years, at Burnaby on Tuesday. Fifteen of the 21-man B.C. squad will be in the Canadian lineup at Calgary.

Lyman Bostock: A Victim Of Circumstance

GARY, Ind. (AP) — The morning before his last game, Lyman Bostock was "really happy," dancing to one of his favorite records in the familiar atmosphere of his uncle's home.

The evening after Bostock's last game, in another part of this grimy steel town 35 miles southeast of Chicago, Leonard Smith went to his estranged wife's house and allegedly threatened her.

A few hours later, at 10:44 p.m. Saturday, their paths crossed.

The well-paid, well-liked baseball star lay mortally wounded by an errant shotgun blast into the back seat of a 1976 Buick. The man who had aimed for Mrs. Smith, who was next to Bostock, fled, only to be captured at his apartment almost seven hours later.

Today, their fates remain linked.

LYMAN BOSTOCK . . . dead at 27

Just three hours after Smith, 31, was to go to court to be formally charged, Bostock, dead at 27, was to return home to Los Angeles from his final road trip. The funeral is Thursday.

"I doubt very much he knew what hit him," Gary Police Sgt. Robert Scheerer said of the shooting late Saturday night. "It's just a tragedy. He didn't even know Mrs. Smith."

Nor, apparently, did he know of her marital problems, police said.

Leonard and Barbara Smith were legally separated about two months ago, said Police Cpl. Charles Hicks, head of the investigation.

Divorce proceedings followed and Smith apparently opposed them, said Hicks. Last Monday, Smith pulled a gun on his wife, he added. Saturday night they met again.

"He follows her every chance he gets. He had been to her home early that evening and he had made a threat. He talked to their daughter and he said 'it wouldn't be long before you would be living with me,'" Hicks said.

For Bostock, it had been a fairly typical day—staying with with his uncle Edward Turner as he always did when his team was in Chicago, getting two hits against the White Sox, and talking baseball.

He went that night to say hello to Joan Hawkins, who he had met nine years ago while visiting relatives in Gary, police said. An Angels' spokesman said she was about 12 then and Bostock used to read to her.

Bostock and another uncle, Thomas Turner, 43, visited Miss Hawkins and her sister, Mrs. Smith, 26, two women whom Turner helped raise, Hicks said. Then Turner was driving the women to see their cousin when Smith pulled up next to their car, Hicks added.

As both cars went through the green light at 5th Avenue and Jackson Street, Smith, apparently unseen by the occupants of Turner's car, pumped a single blast through a window on the right side, Hicks said.

Bostock, seated in the right rear seat, was hit in the right temple and died 2½ hours later. Mrs. Smith, to his left, was wounded by pellets. She is in fair condition.

"Lyman was a victim of circumstances," said Hicks. "His (the gunman's) intended victim was his wife, not Lyman ... They (the cars) were both moving. That's why I think he missed the target."

The willowy Bostock joined Minnesota Twins in 1975 and batted .282 in 98 games. In his next two seasons he climbed to .323 and .336, finishing the 1977 campaign second only to team-mate Rod Carew in the American League batting race.

Last Nov. 2, the left-handed hitter and outstanding fielder was granted his free agency and 19 days later he signed with the Angels for a five-year, $2.7 million contract.

When he got off to a slow start this season, Bostock tried to return one month's salary to Angels' owner Gene Autry. When Autry refused, Bostock found charitable organizations which didn't.

He also found, as the season progressed, the batting touch that had made him a .318 career hitter going into the 1978 campaign.

At the time of his death, he was batting .296 with five home runs and 70 runs batted in.

Bostock's agent, Abdul Jalil, said the player's heirs, including his wife, Yuovene, will be paid under his contract.

Patriots Win One For Injured Mate

By The Associated Press

It is neither a geographical rivalry, nor a divisional one. For Oakland Raiders and New England Patriots, it goes a lot deeper than that.

Hovering over the Oakland Coliseum is the spectre of Darryl Stingley, lying in a California hospital bed, put there by a tragic accident the last time the Patriots and Raiders played.

New England won that exhibition—and lost their star wide receiver in the process. More than anything else on Sunday night, they wanted to beat the Raiders again for him—and they did. Sam Cunningham's one-yard touchdown dive with 16 seconds to play beat Oakland 21-14.

In Pittsburgh, meanwhile, a fake-reverse flea-flicker sudden-death overtime touchdown bomb that started with Terry Bradshaw and finished with Bennie Cunningham 37 yards downfield gave the Steelers a 15-9 victory over Cleveland Browns that kept them unbeaten.

In Sunday's other games, New Orleans Saints beat Cincinnati Bengals 20-16, Green Bay Packers defeated San Diego Chargers 24-3, Buffalo Bills downed Baltimore Colts 24-17, Denver Broncos topped Kansas City Chiefs 23-17 in overtime, Philadelphia Eagles whipped Miami Dolphins 17-3, Los Angeles Rams beat Houston Oilers 10-6, Dallas Cowboys defeated St. Cardinals 21-12, Seattle Seahawks beat Detroit Lions 28-16, Washington Redskins whipped New York Jets 23-3, Tampa Bay Buccaneers surprised Atlanta Falcons 14-9 and New York Giants won 27-17 over San Francisco '49ers.

Tonight, Minnesota Vikings visit Chicago Bears.

Oakland scored twice in the first quarter on Ken Stabler's 13-yard pass to Dave Casper and Arthur Whittington's four-yard run. The Pats got touchdowns in the second on Steve Grogan's 25-yard pass to Russ Francis and in the third on Horace Ivory's 16-yard dash.

Overtime appeared likely until Mike Haynes picked off Stabler's attempted bomb late in the fourth quarter and ran it back 22 yards. Then Grogan rolled out and gained 28 yards to the three-yard line. Two plays later Cunningham bulled in for the winning TD.

"This was a more emotional game than most because we were trying to win for Darryl," said coach Chuck Fairbanks, whose Patriots visited Stingley after the game. "I was really pleased there were no incidents on the field. It was a tough, clean game."

And Cunningham added: "We were supercharged for Darryl tonight. We knew he was listening and we wanted it for him."

With a second-and-nine at the Browns' 37-yard line, Terry Bradshaw handed off to running back Rocky Bleier. He handed off to wide receiver Lynn Swann. He then flipped the ball back to Bradshaw. All this time, Cunningham was speeding downfield. Cunningham, a step behind safety Thom Darden, gathered in Bradshaw's pass for the TD that dropped Cleveland from the unbeaten ranks and out of a share of first in the American Conference's Central Division.

Jim Zorn, sacked five times by Detroit's defence in the first three quarters, got even in the fourth by unleashing three touchdown passes—40 yards to Steve Largent, four yards to Ron Howard and 12 yards to Sam McCullum—that launched the Seahawks past the Lions.

Los Angeles, so potent and close to error-free a week ago against Dallas, staggered and stumbled its way past Houston. Cullen Bryant ran in from the three and Frank Corral kicked a 25-yard field goal for scores, while the Rams allowed Toni Fritsch field goals of 32 and 20 yards.

Say Hi, Mr. Ginnell!

Times News Services

"Getting to Know You" is a catchy tune from the musical "The King and I."

Which is what they may be humming in Lethbridge.

Not yet king but making his acquaintance is Patty Ginnell. The former owner-coach of Victoria Cougars is piloting Lethbridge Broncos of the Western Major Junior Hockey League.

Often criticized for icing teams that consistently become involved in rough play, Ginnell was one of the central figures in a penalty-strewn exhibition in Medicine Hat Saturday night.

The Broncos defeated Medicine Hat Tigers 5-3 in a game marred by a brawl in the opening period that resulted in ejection of five players from each team.

Ginnell pulled the Broncos off the ice with two minutes left in the first period but the teams played 22 minutes in the second.

Over-all, Lethbridge was assessed 13 minor penalties, nine majors, one 10-minute misconduct and five game misconducts. Medicine Hat drew 10 minors, three majors, one misconduct and five game miconducts—most of them in the first period.

Elsewhere, holdovers Ken Federko and Lindsay Carson both scored twice to lead Saskatoon Blades to an 8-5 victory over Regina Pats Sunday. Federko also scored three in Saskatoon's 8-4 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings on Saturday.

Lake Cowichan product Randy Irving scored a pair to spark New Westminster Bruins to a 6-3 victory over Abbotsford Flyers, a B.C. Junior League affiliate.

Dolphins Fail Playoff Test

Victoria Dolphins lost their final bid for a playoff spot in the B.C. Big Four Junior Football League, dropping a 13-7 decision to Surrey Rams in the final home game Sunday at Royal Athletic Park.

The result left Dolphins solidly mired in last place in the five-team league with one away game remaining in their schedule.

The best they could hope for would be a tie with Rams, but the Surrey club has won both games between the teams this season and would take the final playoff spot.

But the contest was close.

Dave Fletcher gave Dolphins the early lead with a six-yard touchdown run in the first quarter which was converted by Iggy Kadar.

In the second quarter, Rick Wenzoski put Surrey on the scoreboard with a two-point safety and Bob Hutton put Rams in front to stay after catching a 21-yard touchdown pass from Shawn Murphy in the third quarter.

Jim Booth kicked the convert and later booted a 27-yard field goal.

A single completed scoring for Surrey but a 60-yard drive in the dying minutes of the game put Dolpins on the Surrey 10-yard line.

Victoria, however, couldn't capitalize on the opportunity. A fumble gave the ball to Surrey, which retained possession until time ran out.

Al Pedersen came up big for Dolphins with a recovered fumble and a quarterback sack, Bob FeFevre and Paul Shepard covered well on the special teams and Rob Kidd and Tod Anderson sparked the Victoria offensive line.

Statistically, Dolphins had 15 first downs, 168 yards rushing, five completed passes in 20 attempts for 96 yards, lost all four fumbles, were hit for nine penalties for a loss of 90 yards and gained 202 yards from eight punts.

The Rams had eight first downs, rushed 166 yards, completed eight of 12 passing attempts for 88 yards, lost four of five fumbles, were assessed seven penalties for 65 yards and gained a whopping 485 yards from 13 punts.

In an exhibition game the same day in Medicine Hat, league-leading Meralomas edged Medicine Hat Rattlers, 26-21.

PHILLIES CLOSING IN ON TITLE IN EAST

'Sunshine Boys' Win West

By The Associated Press

The Sunshine Boys have their act together again, and the result is another National League West pennant for Los Angeles Dodgers.

"We're pulling together more now than we ever did," said second baseman Dave Lopes after the Dodgers clinched their second straight West championship Sunday with a 4-0 victory over San Diego Padres. "As a team, I think we're better than last year."

They had to be.

To win the title this time, the Dodgers not only had more competition on the field, but also overcame several squabbles among themselves—including a publicized dressing room fight in August between pitcher Don Sutton and first baseman Steve Garvey.

That was quite a shocking development for a team which promoted brotherhood and togetherness during the pennant-winning season of 1977 and wore the appellation of The Sunshine Boys, among other names.

"Anytime you have 25 athletes of different backgrounds, there will be differences," said Lopes. "But the players on our team were mature enough to put these things aside."

Their priorities re-established, the Dodgers turned on the power and the pitching and ran away with the West title.

"The pitching was better this year than last," noted Lopes, "no doubt about that."

While the Dodgers were winning the West, Philadelphia Phillies were moving closer to winning the East. Philadelphia's 8-2 victory over New York Mets, coupled with Pittsburgh's 4-0 defeat by Montreal Sunday, improved the Phillies' lead over the Pirates to four games and reduced their "magic number" to five.

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco Giants swept a doubleheader from Houston Astros, 7-0 and 6-4; Cincinnati Reds nipped Atlanta Braves 2-1, and Chicago Cubs edged St. Louis Cardinals 5-4.

Garvey had a double and two singles and drove in three runs, and rookie Bob Welch fired a five-hitter for the Dodgers. Garvey, only six hits shy of his fourth 200-hit season in five years, singled home Los Angeles' first run in the third inning and singled in two more runs in the fourth.

In the American League, New York's Ron Guidry fired a two-hitter for his club-record ninth shutout of the year, pacing the Yankees to a 4-0 victory over Cleveland Indians.

Boston Red Sox stayed one game behind the AL East leaders by beating Toronto Blue Jays 7-6 with the help of a two-out throwing error by third baseman Roy Howell in the 14th inning that allowed Jim Rice to score.

Dan Ford's sixth-inning home run snapped a tie and helped Minnesota Twins to a 6-4 victory over Kansas City Royals. Don Baylor's tie-breaking home run touched off a five-run, sixth-inning rally that carried California Angels to a 7-3 victory over Chicago White Sox.

Aurelio Rodriguez and Alan Trammell singled to drive in ninth-inning runs and Detroit Tigers defeated Baltimore Orioles 4-2 on four unearned runs.

Mike Caldwell recorded his 21st victory and Robin Yount and Jim Wohlford drove in two runs apiece, leading Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-2 victory over Oakland A's.

Al Oliver had three hits and drove in three runs as Texas Rangers defeated Seattle Mariners 5-3 in the opener of a doubleheader.

Juan Beniquez scored twice and tripled home another run, leading Texas to a 4-3 victory in the second game.

Hornets Romp Over Nanaimo

Saanich Hornets, with the help of an upset effort by Oak Bay, moved to within one point of leading Cowichan in the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League Sunday by blanking Nanaimo Headhunters 39-0 at Macdonald Park.

In the other league game, Oak Bay held Cowichan to a 6-6 deadlock in Duncan.

Guy Prevost set the scoring pace for Hornets, who led 18-0 at half time, with three touchdowns. Kim Munro scored a touchdown and kicked five converts, a single and a field goal and Greg Frame scored the other major.

Brian Branting helped Cowichan salvage the tie with a fourth-quarter touchdown after Paul Docherty had booted two field goals for Oak Bay.

Players are still needed in the league and any boy aged 16 to 19 wishing to play may obtain further information by telephoning 598-3235.

Nanaimo Squads Wipe Out Deficits

Nanaimo's two entries are making their presence felt in the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

Both City and United took the comeback route to pull off Sunday victories.

City, playing at home, overcame a 1-0 University of Victoria lead at the half to defeat the Vikings 2-1. Jim Palm opened scoring for the Vikings but Don Attig banged in the tying goal at 48 minutes and Ray Clarke supplied the winner in the 68th minute.

United, promoted from the second division and already a creator of a startling upset of defending champion Victoria Athletics in the pre-season McGavin Cup competition, proved its win over the A's was no fluke by rallying for a 3-2 triumph over Powell Rival Villas.

Down 2-1 at the half, United pulled out its first league triumph on a pair of second-half goals by Rick Sage.

In other games Sunday, Athletics got back on the winning track by blanking Oak Bay 2-0 while Gorge and Cosmopolitan Royals battled to a 1-1 draw.

Victoria West, first-place finisher in the Premier Division last season, looked impressive in blanking Duncan Selects 2-0. Wests have yet to give up a goal in three games, including a pair in the McGavin Cup event.

Vantreights, meanwhile, are making an impressive start in the second division. Promoted from the third division, Vantreights recorded their second straight shutout by belting Athletics 5-0.

Trelawny Produces 23 Oak Bay Points

James Bay, rated by many as Canada's best club side and the dominant power in the Vancouver Island Rugby Union for the past few years, hasn't lost the familiar touch.

The old power showed again Saturday as the Bays cruised to a 39-9 victory over the University of Victoria Vikings in the opening game for both first-division teams.

Tony Slim paced James Bay's attack by scoring three tries and clubmate Tom Lippa counted a pair.

Oak Bay Wanderers, sparked by the kicking of Pat Trelawny, also came up with a smart performance in blanking Castaways 31-0 Sunday at Windsor Park while Cowichan beat Saanich Velox 18-10 at Cowichan.

Trelawny racked up 23 points for Wanderers, kicking five penalty goals and two conversions and also scoring a try.

James Bay's second division squad also came out snarling in its first match. The JBAA seconds trounced Norsemen, Uvic's second team, 53-3, Saturday. Oak Bay edged Castaways 10-7 in a second-division match Sunday.

Fifth Tour Victory For Rested Watson

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Tom Watson retured to the golf tour after a three-week break and it was no break for his fellow pros.

"Tom just got so far ahead there wasn't much any of us could do," Ed Sneed admitted after finishing second to Watson by three strokes in Napa's $200,000 event which ended Sunday.

Watson went into the final round tied for second, one stroke behind Jay Haas, but was in control after recording an eagle three with a 25-foot putt at the fifth hole and then adding five birdies later in the round.

"I was rested, and I played as if I was rested," said Watson, who had a five-under-par 67, his fourth consecutive round under 70, and finished with an 18-under total of 270 to claim a $40,000 cheque.

Sneed came in with a 70 Sunday to finish at 273, Barry Jaeckel took third with 72-275 and there was a four-way tie at 276 involving Orville Moody, D.A. Weibring, Bob Gilder and Bob Zender.

Watson now has won five tournaments this year to equal his 1977 total and, with $343,429 in tour earnings, has virtually clinched his second consecutive money-winning title. Should Watson win the $100,000 first-place prize in next weekend's World Series of Golf, he'll become the first golfer in history to have a $400,000 year.

The standing single-season record of $353,000 set by Johnny Miller in 1974 is almost sure to fall next week. Miller, by the way, blew a chance to pick up a decent paycheque and increase his sickly 1978 money earnings when he was disqualified Sunday for signing an incorrect scorecard.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby and Toronto's George Knudson both finished with 284 totals and earned $511 each. Nelford shot a 72 on Sunday while Knudson had a 73.

CARROLL SIGNS

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Centre Greg Carroll, a first-round draft pick of Washington Capitals in 1976, has signed a contract with the National Hockey League club.

HONOR AND GLORY JUST NOT ENOUGH

SUTTON COLDFIELD, England (Reuter) — Severiano Ballesteros will not play for Spain when that country defends the World Cup golf in Hawaii in December.

After completing a five-and-four victory over Scotland's Ken Brown in a team contest between golfers of Britain and Ireland and of Europe here Saturday, Bellesteros said: "I am just not prepared to travel 25,000 miles just for honor and glory.

"I am a professional golfer and there is no money in the World Cup so I shall not play."

The 21-year-old Spanish star has brought World Cup to Spain for the last two years, first with Manuel Pinero and then with Antonio Garrido.

Ballesteros, who will compete in the $300,000 World Series of Golf at Akron, Ohio, this week, added: "I have helped Spain win the World Cup for the last two years and I have enjoyed it very much. But there is no money for winning and no appearance fee. So while the World Cup is on I shall be resting at home."

Huskies Show Prairie Power

Can it be that British Columbia's domination of soccer in the Canada West University Athletic Association is over?

It used to be that UBC Thunderbirds and, more recently, Victoria's Vikings who were consistently considered the teams to beat.

The Prairie teams are no longer pushovers. There's balance, and any one of five teams that make up the league still have a chance to top the round-robin series that will determine the CWUAA representatives in the Canadian finals.

The Prairie improvement showed Saturday when Saskatchewan Huskies, who had beaten UBC 3-0 on Friday, came to town and held the defending-champion Vikings to a 1-1 tie.

Victoria dominated action most of the way at Topaz Park but could only manage one goal — by slick John Leier at the 30-minute mark. Gordie Heath salvaged the draw for Saskatchewan by scoring in the 65th minute.

Calgary Dinosaurs, who upset Vikings last week, are the only unbeaten team. The Dinnies tied Alberta Golden Bears 3-3 Saturday and now have a 1-0-1, won-lost-tied record. UBC (1-1-1), Saskatchewan (1-1-1) and Victoria (1-1-2) also have three points. Alberta has managed only a single point in two games.

Birdie Settles It

PORTLAND (AP) — Donna Caponi Young sank a 25-foot birdie putt on the third hole of a sudden-death playoff Sunday and she and her teammate, Kathy Whitworth, won the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association team championship.

Young and Whitworth finished the regulation 54 holes tied with Murle Breer and Barbara Moxness at 16-under-par on the par-73 Columbia-Edgewater course.

Breer, 39, forced the playoff with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

Both pairings recorded pars on the first two playoff holes before moving to the par-five, 480-yard third. All four players were within birdie range but Young's was the longest.

After Young, 33, sank the pressure shot, Breer missed a seven-foot birdie try and Moxness, a 25-year-old rookie, failed to sink a 10-footer from the fringe of the green.

Young's half of the $20,000 first prize will bring her tournament earnings to $84,000 this year, and Whitworth will have won $59,000, but earnings from the team championship don't count in the official LPGA money standings.

First-roound leaders Beverly Klass and Jo Ann Dost finished third at minus 15.

The team of Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., and Shelley Hamlin had a final-round 75 for 214, including a 70 Saturday.

Dale Shaw of Victoria and American partner Susan Lynn failed the make the cut Saturday with a 148 total. They had a 77 in the second round and miss the cut by four strokes.

Yarborough Wins By a Car Length

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Cale Yarborough passed Darrell Waltrip with 13 laps to go and won a stretch duel in Sunday's Old Dominion 500 Grand National stock car race.

Yarborough finished a car length ahead of Waltrip in a rousing conclusion to what had been a lopsided race, in Yarborough's favor, since the early stages.

Yarborough twice fought back into the lead after flat tires forced him to make unscheduled pit stops, one with just 15 miles to go.

After he passed Waltrip, Yarborough said his strategy was just to stay ahead.

"I didn't want to run away from him, I just wanted to stay ahead," Yarborough said. "I knew unless I made a mistake on the race track, I had it won."

Pole position starter Lennie Pond led the first 45 laps, but then started to fall behind. He finished fifth. Sportsman ace Harry Gant, in a rare Grand National start, led the next 45 laps before his car's engine locked and sidelined him.

After that, Yarborough displayed numbing consistency, constantly circling his challengers and, except for the persistent Waltrip, putting them all more than two laps down.

Benny Parsons was third, followed by Neil Bonnett, both two laps down. Pond was four laps down.

SKI TOTO ARRIVES NEXT DECEMBER

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss Ski Federation has launched the first betting pool for World Cup skiing to be introduced anywhere in the world.

Copying the soccer pools system of mailed coupons, the Ski Toto comes into effect in December and will cover six men's downhill races during the forthcoming World Cup season, said a federation statement announcing the scheme.

"We hope the system will in time become as much of a household name as the soccer pool," federation director Adolph Ogi said.

"Why do so many people go south when Gulf can keep them warm all winter for less?"

These Gulf Home Comfort Services let you take your heating for granted all winter long.

Winter is almost here and the last thing you really want to worry about is making arrangements for oil delivery. It's something you just like to take for granted. As a Gulf fuel oil customer you can do just that. Your Gulf deliveryman will see to it that your oil is automatically delivered all winter.

Another comforting thought with Gulf is that you have 24-hour emergency breakdown service for your furnace. One call day or night and we'll be there fast to put your furnace back in working order.

Your best security this winter is the Gulf Furnace Protection Plan. It covers repairs or replacement of most mechanical parts and labour, 24-hour emergency service, 24-point servicing, and is available with optional tuning, which is designed to increase your furnace efficiency.

If you wish you may purchase Gulf's 24-point servicing separately, with or without the optional tuning. It's a sure way to put your furnace in top condition for the cold months ahead.

And, the Gulf Budget Plan allows you to plan ahead by spreading your fuel oil payments over 12 months, at no extra charge. You can also include Furnace Protection Plan payments in the budget plan.

At Gulf Home Comfort, we offer efficient heating you can take for granted all winter long. For more information, just give us a call at the number listed below:

Canadians Fifth

MADRID (CP) — Canada defeated Japan 4-0 Sunday to place fifth place in the 10-country World Cup field hockey competition, in which the Netherlands won the title with a 1-0 victory over West Germany.

Sandy Tufnail of Burnaby led the Canadians with two goals. Captain Sandy Drever of Calgary and Shelley Winter of Victoria added the others in the third consecutive shutout for Canada.

Conditioning and a relentless passing attack paid off for the Canadians as they ran away from the Japanese in 35 C heat with first-half goals by Drever and Winter.

"We had no idea how we would do in this tournament," said Tufnail. "It was our first appearance in a World Cup and I think everybody is happy with our placement."

Canada had been ranked 15th following the last world championships in 1975.

Canada defeated Spain 3-0 and Czechoslovakia 3-0. The club tied India 1-1 and lost to Argentina 1-0 and eventual winner the Netherlands 6-0.

The Canadians came on strongly after their early defeats.

VIRDON REHIRED

HOUSTON (AP) — Manager Bill Virdon and his Houston Astros coaching staff has been rehired for the 1979 baseball season.

Evergreen Returns Trophy to Canada

DETROIT (CP) — Evergreen returned the Canada's Cup trophy to Canada for the first time since 1969 Saturday with an "easy" victory over the defending yacht Agape in the final short-course event of the six-race series.

Evergreen, skippered by Don Green of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club, continued to outmanoeuvre her opponent after falling behind in the early marks of the race.

Evergreen was behind by 17 seconds rounding the second mark Saturday but was more than a minute ahead after the third leg.

"Another easy win," remarked one of the Hamilton delegation who followed the series through the two weeks of sailing on nearby Lake St. Clair and for the longer race on Lake Huron.

The only two races the American defender won were when Evergreen came to grief. The Canadian vessel ran aground in the third race and in the two-point, long-distance race on Lake Huron she held a four-minute lead when her mast split.

The American yacht, defending the trophy, held a three-two points lead after the Lake Huron race and Evergreen had to win the final two short races here to return the yachting series trophy to Canada.

It is only the fourth time in 13 series that a Canadian entry has won.

Sensitive Prince Sets Mark

Times News Services

Sensitive Prince smashed a track record Saturday while scoring a 4¼-length victory in the $122,800 Hawthorne Derby in Chicago.

Sensitive Prince, the 1-10 favorite of the crowd of 14,374 went the mile and 1-16th in 1:39 2-5, cutting one second from the previous mark.

Gordie H. ran second in the race for three-year-olds.

At Belmont Park in New York, Late Bloomer, a four-year-old filly, overtook Pearl Necklace in the stretch and closed with a rush along the rail to win the $108,100 Ruffian Handicap for fillies and mares, running the mile and an eighth in 1:47, a record for the event.

At Bay Meadows in San Mateo, Calif., Roman Oblisk scored a 1½-length victory over Run the Flag in the six-furlong, $32,250 Sir Francis Drake Stakes.

At Exhibition Park in Vancouver, the three-year-old On Your Way, almost completely ignored in the betting, came from off the pace on the rail to win the $20,000-added Sir Winston Churchill, a 1⅛-mile, weight-for-age stakes.

On Your Way, ridden by Robert Stein, paid $34, $13.10 and $5.50. Pampas Host was a head behind at the wire, with First Purchase four lengths back.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Generally speaking, when the opponents have bid three suits enroute to a slam contract in a suit, one tends to select the unbid suit as his opening lead. The reason, of course, is that if the slam-bidding side has any weakness, the probability is that it is in the unbid suit.

But, after having decided to lead the unbid suit, the question often remains as to which card to lead. The latter was the situation in which our West defender found himself in today's deal. As will be observed, he came up with the winning decision.

Both sides vulnerable.
South deals.

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 8 4
♡ K Q 9 5
◇ A J
♣ 10 8

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♣.

When South made his cue bid of five diamonds, he was hoping that his partner would bid six clubs, showing first-round control of clubs. Had North made the latter bid, South undoubtedly would have contracted for the grand slam in hearts.

Having listened to the bidding, and having heard North and South bid every suit except clubs, West knew that his opening lead was going to be a club. Based on North's original response of two no-trump, denoting possession of a stopper in each of the unbid suits, North rated to have the club king.

With the fervent hope that his partner possessed the club queen, at trick one West led the deuce of clubs, underleading his ace! South, after a few moments' thought, played low from dummy, expecting that West was more likely to be leading away from the queen rather than from the ace. This was a sound percentage play, since a queen is far more underled than an ace.

On the play of a low club from dummy, East put up his queen, which won the trick. He then made haste to return a club and West's ace took the setting trick.

Had West not led a club at trick one, declarer would have made his contract with ease, since he had five spade tricks, four hearts and three diamonds.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Ben was looking at an invoice. "Funny!" he exclaimed. "You know the bags we bought last week? Two styles, and as many of each as its price in dollars. The difference between the totals is just $136."

"I did notice the numbers, but you did the buying," Sarah replied.

"Sure, and I don't mean that," Ben told her. "Last month we had an invoice for bags the same way. Numbers same as prices, but not so many. And there was exactly the same $136 difference." How many were bought on the two occasions?

Thanks for idea to Hugh Spencer, Barrie, Ont.

Up in the Air Over Nuptials

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — A 27-year-old man and his bride exchanged marriage vows Saturday while flying in a helicopter hovering 500 metres (1,500 feet) over the Horseshoe Falls.

John Castellan, machine operator at a General Motors of Canada Ltd. plant in St. Catharines, Ont., and Sharon Martin, 24, owner of a city hairdressing salon, completed most of their ceremony in a United Church.

Then the couple hopped into the helicopter, flown by the bride's stepfather, and flew over the falls where they ended the marriage ceremony by answering "I do" and signed a register.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — Former film star Ruth Etting, a member of Ziegfeld's Follies who began her singing career on radio in 1922, died Sunday in hospital following a long illness. She was 80.

DAVIS, Calif. — Allan Bakke, a 38-year-old engineer whose name has become a symbol of conflict over school admissions and race, enters medical school at the University of California today.

With protesters announcing plans to picket outside, Bakke, who is white, is to begin classes at the university's Davis campus under a U.S. Supreme Court order that vetoed the school's preferential-admissions program for minorities.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Publisher Al Goldstein is planning a party in New York City for the nine jurors who helped acquit him in a federal obscenity trial last year in Kansas City, Kan.

"I've been wanting to thank them," Goldstein said in a telephone interview Saturday.

Goldstein says he has reserved Plato's Retreat, a "swingers" club, for the all-night celebration Nov. 8, which coincides with his Screw magazine's 10th anniversary.

Besides food, Goldstein said the event will feature jugglers, magicians and fire-eaters for the more than 800 expected guests.

"I want to create a Fellini-like circus atmosphere," he said.

Estimated cost: $20,000 plus.

MOSCOW — Two Soviet cosmonauts, sipping a herbal cure-all and rarely using their first-aid kit, became Sunday the first spacemen in earth orbit for more than 100 days.

A Soviet doctor monitoring their condition reported that after passing the crucial six-week hurdle in mid-summer the health of Vladimir Kovalenok and Alexander Ivanchenkov reached a stable level and "we are fully satisfied with their state of health."

LONDON — Princess Margaret left here Sunday on a marathon Asian and Pacific tour which will include stops in Fiji, Japan, the Philippines and Tuvalu.

The princess will stay in California a few days before beginning the tour.

MAN GUILTY

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Leonard Bertrand, 42, was found guilty Friday of setting fire to the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board offices in Matsqui earlier this year.

Bertrand, a former employee of the board, will be sentenced next month.

Political Future Up to Voters: Davis

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former cabinet minister Jack Davis, whose fraud conviction led to his resignation from his North Vancouver-Seymour seat in the provincial legislature, said Friday he hasn't ruled out the possibility of a return to political life.

"How active I can be is something others will have to decide," he said.

Davis said in an interview four days after Judge J. J. Anderson fined him $1,000 and placed him on two months probation for defrauding the Crown by misrepresenting travel expenses that he still has the support of the Social Credit Association in his former riding.

Electors, he said, would be the ones to decide on his political future.

He said an appeal against either his conviction or sentence, or both, is "being actively considered" by him and his lawyers.

"I hate to think that I might have the fraud tag for any length of time," he said.

REMAINS OF CHEE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police say they believe that a box found July 8 under an abandoned dock at the north foot of Gore Street contains the partial remains of Kim Hong Chee, 84, who was killed about four years ago.

The box contained the skull, limbs and personal effects of a man police believe was Chee. A torso was found May 19, 1975 at the rear of a warehouse seven blocks from the foot of Gore.

Police said they have no suspects in the killing.

Box-Like Room a Challenge

A room's box-like look offers exciting possibilities to anyone with imagination.

The challenge is there, as an empty canvas is to an artist or blank paper to a writer. To those who are not creative, ideas are seen everywhere, in newspapers and magazines, to be borrowed or adapted to fit one's needs and taste.

Such an idea is presented here by interior designer Mel Grau. And the idea offers potential for changes in its execution.

As presented here, wood panelling covers the original plaster wall, and behind the bed, the area conventionally used for a headboard, ten-inch wide mirror strips alternate with ten-inch strips of panelling. The mirrors replace a headboard, normally a furniture item, yet because they are part of the wall, they are architectural. Their reflection of light brings brightness to this end of the room, and the reflection also makes the room seem larger than its actual size.

For variations of the idea, other reflecting surfaces could be substituted for the mirrors, such as Mylar, aluminum or any shiny coated surface. Or forsaking the mirror idea, other combinations are possible, such as wallpapered panels alternating with the wood or with painted panels instead of the natural finish wood.

Putting a definite wall design above the bed as replacement for a headboard is the main idea.

SMOKES CUT MATES' LIVES, SAYS STATISTICIAN

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A statistician has completed a study indicating that non-smoking women married to smoking husbands die an average of four years earlier than those whose husbands don't smoke.

Gus H. Miller, statistician at Edinboro State College, says the study proves so-called "passive smoking" is harmful.

The Tobacco Institute, however, discounts Miller's findings as "bordering on non-science."

Miller, long an anti-cigarette advocate, obtained death records for Erie County, Pa., for the years 1972-1975.

Miller and his assistants interviewed survivors of the deceased and recorded detailed information on smoking habits, work habits, general health and weight, and spouses' smoking habits. The study only considered husbands who were continuous smokers, not those who started late or quit early.

After more than 8,000 interviews, Miller separated the non-smoking women into two groups — those married to regular smokers and those married to men who never smoked.

He computed the average age at death for wives of non-smoking men at 78.8 years, compared with 74.7 years for women married to smokers.

"I think it is pretty self-explanatory," Miller said in a telephone interview. "This shows a somewhere near 5 percent reduction in life span for women whose husbands smoke — and it seems attributable to the fact the husband smokes, because all the variables were constant.

"They were all non-smoking women."

Miller has many critics, chief among them The Tobacco Institute, Inc., a group funded by tobacco growers to counter smoking criticism.

Bill Dwyer, an Institute spokesman, said Miller's study, "has to pass under the banner of non-science."

"It just flies in the face of the expert medical testimony. This is essentially the way the whole case against tobacco has been made, through the use of statistics and the abuse of statistics," he said.

Dwyer specifically criticized Miller's statistical use of average age at death. Dwyer cited studies showing more smokers in the 25-34 age group than in 35-44, 55-64, or 65 and older groups, and said that meant persons dying young would have a greater chance of having been smokers than persons dying old.

Miller does not agree.

"That absolutely does not apply in this instance," he explained. "It is true that if we get the average age at death of bubble gum chewers and compare it with the average age of death of the general population, there will be a great disparity, because bubble gum chewers are usually young kids.

"But in this case I took a single group of people — non-smoking women. The only difference is the husband smoked or the husband didn't smoke. Average age at death in this case is a perfectly valid method."

Miller, who also holds degrees in chemistry and psychology, forbids smoking in his home or office, and regulary runs clinics to help smokers shed the habit.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Why do all 50-and 60-year-old men want 25-and 30-year-old women, when we 50-year-old women would be so much better for them?—FIFTY AND LONELY

DEAR FIFTY: First, not ALL 50-and 60-year-old men want 25- and 30-year-old women, but who's to say what's "better" for those who do?

As for those May-December marriages, they are usually a trade-off, and all that is necessary for a marriage to succeed is two people who need each other. It matters little what each needs from the other, as long as the need is real and fulfilled.

DEAR ABBY: In a courtship between a woman 68 and a man 70, who should offer the first kiss?

Please don't think this is a joke. I am a widow and he is a widower, and we are getting very close to where I will need the answer.

If he should make the first move, should I respond willingly? Women used to sit back and let the men make all the overtures, but perhaps women's lib has changed all that. Or has it?

OLDSTERS

DEAR OLSTERS: If you feel like kissing him, go ahead and kiss him. He'll probably meet you halfway, and beat you to the finish line.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young widow. (Under 30.) My husband died less than a year ago in a tragic accident and I'm still not over it.

I've always been very close to my in-laws, and since my husband's death I have had dinner at their place once a week.

Now my problem: Three weeks ago, when I went to my in-law's home for dinner, my mother-in-law wasn't home yet, but my father-in-law was. Well, he made improper advances toward me. At first I thought he was just being affectionate in a fatherly way, but he started holding me tight and kissing me, I realized that he had something else in mind. I was totally stunned when he started to unbutton my blouse! I freed myself, ran to my car and drove home.

Since that night I haven't been back there. My mother-in-law keeps asking me when I'm coming, but I don't want to face my father-in-law again. What do I tell my mother-in-law? Just thinking about that incident turns my stomach. Help me, please.—NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Go back to your in-laws and try to resume your former good relationship. At the very first opportunity tell your father-in-law privately that if he ever makes another pass at you, you will tell his wife. I doubt if you'll have any trouble with him after that.

Why are the best cloth napkin bargains usually on printed napkins? Because solids sell best; they go with print or solid tablecloths or placemats. But if you can't resist the low prices on printed napkins, remember to get extra use from them by mixing prints with solids when you have more dinner guests than you have solid napkins.

A reminder: No soft electric motor hums to remind you that your small calculator is still on after you've cleared the numbers.

Every day the unit is left on drains another 24 hours from the life of the batteries. Say the batteries have a 2,000-hour life; that sounds endless until you figure those hours equal less than 84 days.

Bio-dex

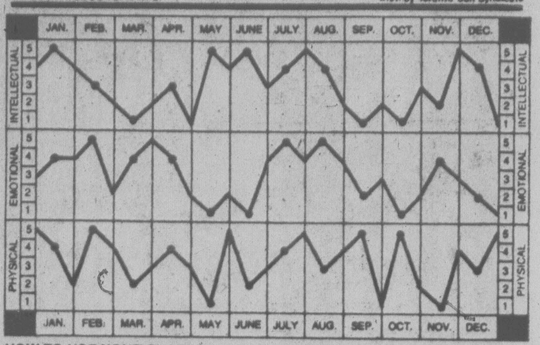
Sept. 26/78

By Ken J. Michaels

Your computerized biorhythm

©BIODEX PRODUCTIONS 1978

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate



HOW TO USE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your biorhythm readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional and Physical factors, from 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to obtain your Bio-dex. The Bio-dex is computed on average population age based on official Government statistics.

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle-	Don't ask for added work responsibilities unless it's absolutely necessary to do so. Be cautious.
6-10 Neutral Cycle-	It's wise to let your boss know that you respect him if such is the case. Seek his advice when necessary.
11-15 Positive Cycle-	Don't hesitate to make on-the-job decisions if you have the details. Chances have to be taken at times.

On November 10, 1871 famous explorer David Livingstone was a prisoner of sickness in the middle of unknown Africa. His Bio-dex that day showed a double critical and indeed he had no hope of rescue. Suddenly the amazing American journalist Henry Morton Stanley appeared in the lonely village, with his famous greeting: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" Stanley's Bio-dex? Well over 10 points and at a physical high.

What Tachs Read

WHEELS

By Michael Lamm

Dear Mike: I recently installed a tachometer in my 1978 Chevrolet Sport pickup. This vehicle has full-time 4-wheel drive and automatic. At 50 mph, the tach registers 1000 rpm. At idle, the tach shows 400 rpm. These figures seem low to me. On the back of the tachometer is a switch that says 4-6-8. My pickup has a V-8, so I set the switch on 8. if I move the switch to 4 or 6, the rpm reading goes up. My question is, what is a normal rpm for this vehicle at 50 mph? Could the tach be wired wrong inside?—REVVED UP

Dear Revved: I don't know your pickup's axle ratio nor tire size, but an average tach reading in a normal passenger car would be miles per hour times 30. In other words, at 50 mph the reading would be 1500 rpm and at 60 it would be 1800. Your pickup's tach would likely read higher because of lower gearing. I can't tell you why your particular tach is reading low, but I do know that some late-model electronic ignition systems aren't compatible with conventional tachometers. You might talk to your Chevy dealer.

* * *

Dear Mike: The simulated wood siding on our 1973 Ford Country Squire wagon has faded badly. Although the car is in good mechanical condition, it looks terrible. Can the old panelling be stripped off and the car repainted? Is this expensive? Please help.—FADED AWAY

Dear Faded: The woodgrain can be replaced—and yes, it is expensive; about $400-$700. The old material isn't hard to remove. The 3M Company makes a liquid stripper. But repainting the stripped sections never looks quite right. What you might do is have a bodyshop strip off the woodgrain, then remove the trim surrounding the woodgrained area, and finally fill the trim holes. The entire wagon can then be repainted one color and usually looks good.

* * *

Dear Mike: I need advice on coordinating snow tires on my 1975 Celica GT 5-speed. Last winter I had an accident in the mountains. The tire people told me that I had mismatched front and rear tires. I had studded Michelin steel-belted radial snow tires on the back and Bridgestone steel-belted radials up front, all the same size. The shop said I should have matched the fronts and rears in brands as well as type. I've always known that radials shouldn't be mixed with other sorts of tires, but I thought it was all right to have different brands of radials on the two axles. What's your opinion?—GETTING TIRED

Dear Getting: You're right—so long as all four tires are of the same basic type, you shouldn't have any handling problems.

Common Currency, Levesque's Goal

NORANDA, Que. (CP) — The Parti Quebecois spent two more days of soul searching on the weekend, and by the time it was over the delegates had seen Premier Rene Levesque nail down the first plank in the PQ referendum campaign—an independent Quebec will try to negotiate a common currency with Canada.

The official announcement was made by Levesque on Sunday, but word had already leaked out the night before, via Pierre de Bellefeuille, parliamentary secretary to Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin.

De Bellefeuille told a workshop at the weekend meeting of the PQ national council—the party's governing body—that the cabinet had reached a consensus on monetary union last month at a closed-door meeting of its own in Montebello.

Confirming the news, Levesque took a mild verbal swipe at de Bellefeuille for his "impromptu" revelation and rebuked him for announcing a cabinet position without authorization.

In the past, such PQ stalwarts as Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau had spoken of a customs union or free-trade zone, but insisted that a common currency was not necessary.

The premier was under no illusion that English Canada will greet the idea of monetary union with open arms. "Rejection would be par for the course," he said.

"We're going to get more of that," Levesque said. But if the independence referendum produces "a good yes vote," the premier said he is confident English-Canadians will be ready to negotiate the new economic deal.

Sovereignty-association, defined as a politically independent Quebec maintaining a common currency and a free-trade area with Canada, would be "an offer they can't refuse," he maintained.

The premier pledged his government would release a statement early next month sketching the remaining outlines of the PQ option, and a group headed by senior policy adviser Pierre Harvey will be drafting a working document for submission to party members at the PQ's next national council meeting Dec. 2-3 in Montreal.

A final statement of principle is expected to emerge at a party convention next May in Quebec City, in plenty of time for the referendum expected in late 1979 or early 1980.

Party officials said aspects of sovereignty-association to be considered will include joint institutions between Canada and Quebec, free movement of people and commodities, financial accords, transport, and Quebec's international role within the association.

More $ On Fewer Students

MONTREAL (CP) — More and more tax dollars are being spent to educate fewer and fewer children, says Robert Jackson, head of the Ontario Royal Commission on Dropping School Enrolments.

Jackson, who said in a recent interview that declining enrolment is the "most dramatic" problem in education today, will be leading a discussion on that subject in Quebec City this week at a convention of the Canadian Education Associaton.

The 67-year-old Jackson raised a furore last May by telling a London, Ont., audience that "the only immigrants this country gets are from countries of uncontrolled fertility."

He now says the uproar over his remarks resulted from a misunderstanding — he is not a racist but was simply trying to show his audience what the ethnic and racial character of Canada could be if birth rate and immigraton trends continue.

Dropping school enrolments will be accompanied by even higher school taxes in the future, he said. As more schools are shut down, students will be bused farther to other schools, and will be offered fewer courses and activities.

Statistcs Canada reports that there were 3.8 million grade school students in Canada in 1968, but there will be only 3 million in the early 1980s.

Turmoil Seen Over Food

WINNIPEG (CP) — An internationally celebrated scientist and humanitarian forecasts turmoil unmatched in world history unless countries pull together to meet future food needs.

Dr. Norman E. Borlaug of Mexico City, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1970 and last year's recipient of the presidential Medal of Freedom in the United States, said the challenge can only be met by worldwide political and economic will.

By the year 2015, Borlaug told the closing session of the International Cereal and Bread Congress, food supplies will have to be doubled to more than six billion metric tons.

The implications of such an order are enormous, he said, and it cannot be met by the few traditional food exporters alone, or by developing other food sources.

"There is a lot of unrealistic talk about the oceans being a source of food to feed the world," he said.

"But only about two per cent of the world's total food tonnage now comes from the oceans and most of the future needs will have to continue to come from the land."

Borlaug, who won the peace prize for his work in developing new high-yielding wheat varieties, added that about 11 per cent of the world's land surface is arable and much of that is marginal.

To obtain food needs from such a small amount of land will require great advances in agronomic practices, technology and political leadership and co-operation from all countries.

He said arguments against the use of chemical fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides are nonsense.

"Those arguments come from people who have never had empty stomachs."

Borlaug, who has lived and travelled in many of the developing countries of the world, also spoke on the need to control populations.

Price-setting Method Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should join developing countries in world commodity groups to stabilize prices and save jobs in industries such as nickel and copper mining, says an Ottawa-based group.

The North-South Institute, which specializes in international development problems, also said in a report released today the government should look into activities of Canadian multinational firms in world markets. The institute pointed to the nickel industry where Canadian multinationals have laid off many workers in Canada while remaining active in other countries.

Bernard Wood, institute executive director, said in a telephone interview the government has to be "hard-headed about the mobility of the transnational that is footloose and bidding and bargaining everywhere on earth." He suggested the government should be ready to bargain for Canadian interests.

The institute report, which examines some of the major demands of developing countries in international economic talks, urged the government to commit $20 million immediately to an international common fund to finance buffer stocks for some commodities. The common fund has been accepted in principle by the rich industrialized countries but there has been little action in the last year.

It is in Canada's self-interest to plunge into consumer-producer commodity associations setting prices, the report said. Joining associations in the copper and nickel mining industries would benefit both Canada and producers in poorer countries, although such groups would be resisted by the United States.

Canada has "nothing to gain and much to lose" in balking at participating in commodity groups, the institute said.

The benefits to this country in reduced inflation alone would be worth several times the cost of buffer stocks and the common fund.

Neutron Bomb Hit

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates attending a disarmament conference passed a resolution recommending that the federal government oppose testing, development and production of the neutron bomb by any member of North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The 60 delegates at a conference, sponsored by the Peoples' Assembly on Canadian Foreign Policy also decided to observe the week of Oct. 24 as peace week in Canada. The conference ended Sunday.

In June, the UN urged all member countries to organize a peace week as a way of bringing public attention to the urgent need for disarmament.

Federal Grits and PQ Get Quebecers' Vote

MONTREAL (CP) — A majority of Quebecers say they are satisfied with both federal and provincial governments, according to a survey published Sunday in the weekly newspaper Dimanche Matin.

The survey, carried out by the Quebec Institute of Public Opinion Inc. between Sept. 7 and 12, showed that 57.5 per cent of respondents are satisfied with the Trudeau government, while 53.4 per cent are satisfied with the performance of the Parti Quebecois government.

The same survey showed the federal Liberal party has a strong lead over the Progressive Conservatives in Quebec, with 53.5 per cent of respondents saying they would vote Liberal, 10.8 per cent Conservative and 6.9 per cent for the New Democratic Party if an election were held tomorrow. Considering the preferences of undecided voters, this would give the Liberals 67.9 per cent, the Conservatives 13.7 per cent and the NDP 8.8 per cent.

The survey also indicated 45.4 per cent of Quebecers think of themselves as Canadians first, while 36.8 per cent think of themselves as Quebecers first.

English-speaking Quebecers replied they are Canadians first by a large majority of 78.8 per cent, while a more modest 41.0 per cent of French-speaking Quebecers put themselves in this category.

On the question of constitutional options, of those who said they would vote Liberal, 83.7 per cent were opposed to the separation of Quebec from Canada, 46.4 per cent were for the maintenance of the present federal system, and 45.6 were opposed to the status quo.

Bullfight Bore And No Gore

DETROIT (AP) — What was billed as the U.S. Midwest's first bullfights, opposed by animal groups and at least one Michigan legislator, proved to be nearly as much without danger and suspense as they were bloodless.

Four matadors in glittering gold ceremoniously danced before almost gentle animals Saturday night in a ring at Cobo Arena.

The event had brought protests from the Michigan Humane Society and although pickets were expected, none showed up.

The only protests Saturday came before the fights when a handful of Mexican-Americans objected that the U.S. version allowing the bull to live was a farce.

And when the event finally got under way, the animals, flown in from Mexico, appeared uninterested in the bright, swirling pink and red capes. The bulls more often engaged in lengthy staring matches with frustrated matadors.

"These bulls aren't worth a damn," scoffed Antonio Del Toro, one of the 2,100 predominantly Mexican-American crowd who paid $10 apiece to attend the event in the 9,800-seat arena.

The crowd began to trickle out after the second of four scheduled bullfights. But it perked up for a moment when one bull whipped the cape out of a matador's hands. Forced to the ground, the man was saved from the bull's horns when a comrade with a cape distracted the angry animal.

One other matador was forced up the side railing by the same bull, but the animals soon lost interest and wandered off.

"The bulls used in Mexico are twice this size and are thrashing around in their stalls," Del Toro said. "These matadors aren't risking anything. A kicked cow would respond better than these bulls."

The bloodless bullfight—in which matadors prove their skill by placing a rose between the horns of the defeated bull instead of killing it—was a belated celebration of Mexico's Sept. 16 independence anniversary, promoter Tony Vaccaro said.

Gas Bill Victory Forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's embattled energy program appears headed for its first congressional victory in months as the Senate and House of Represenatives wade through busy agendas in hopes of finishing the year's work by mid-October.

Opponents of a hard-fought compromise on the natural-gas section of Carter's 17-month-old energy plan are expected to make one more attempt today or Tuesday to try to scuttle the measure by returning it to committee. But they concede it will be an uphill fight.

Supporters of the bill — which would remove price controls from most natural gas by 1985 — say they now have more than enough votes to approve the measure on a scheduled vote Wednesday.

This week is also expected to see the Senate finance committee complete work on its version of a tax-cut bill. It is currently considering a much more modest reduction than the proposed 33.3-percent tax cut being championed by Republicans.

The energy and tax-reduction bills have been given top priority by leaders of both chambers, who say they will not end the 1978 session until they are passed.

JAYCEES TO OUST WOMEN

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A Dec. 1 deadline for Massachusetts, Alaska and Washington, D.C., chapters of the Jaycees to get rid of women members will not be extended, Barry Kennedy, U.S. national Jaycee president, said Sunday.

Kennedy, a farmer from Pawnee City, Neb., told a news conference that a three-year pilot program allowing women full membership in the three areas ends then and that he would not extend it.

He said the national headquarters would revoke the charters of any chapter that still lists women as members next year.

Jaycees meeting at a national convention in Atlantic City, N.J., voted by a wide margin last June against a proposal that would have allow women full membership in the Jaycees.

Kennedy had been urged by proponents of women members to postponed the deadline until the question is again put before the national meeting in Nashville, Tenn., in June.

Chuck Sulkala, past state president of the Massachusetts organization, said there now are about 800 women members in 87 state chapters, with about 20 of them holding positions of president or other high offices.

Shroud's Imprint Backed

TURIN, Italy (AP) — Italian electronic experts, using a method developed by U.S. space scientists, have produced computer-enhanced photos of the Holy Shroud, which they said provide more evidence that it bears the impression of a man's body.

The shroud is believed by some people to be the linen in which Jesus Christ was wrapped for burial after the crucifixion.

Photographs produced by Giovanni Tamburelli and Giovanni Garbotto were based on the work of Eric Jumper and John Jackson at the Jet Propulsion Centre in Pasadena, Calif., for the Mars Viking program. They said Jumper and Jackson showed their computerized photographs of Mars at a conference in Albuquerque, N.M., in March, 1977.

Tamburelli and Barbotto said their studies show the linen has a relief image of a man. They said the photos would have clearly shown brush marks if the image was painted on, as some have suggested.

The Holy Shroud has been on public display in Turin's Roman Catholic cathedral.

Fighting Marchers Arrested

LONDON (Reuter) — Police arrested 28 people here Sunday as they kept apart thousands of right- and left-wing demonstrators.

The trouble arose from two marches, one by members of the white-supremist National Front, the other by their bitter opponents, the Anti-Nazi League.

While about 28,000 people were involved in the demonstrations, there were no major incidents because police had requested they be held in separate areas of London.

Most of the arrests came when small groups clashed outside the headquarters of the National Front, which wants Britain's two million non-whites expelled.

The 3,000 front supporters, waving Union Jacks and chanting "The reds, the reds, we're going to get rid of the reds," walked about 6½ kilometres.

Helicopters circled above and police on horseback accompanied the marchers, while security forces numbering in the hundreds flanked the route from central London's Charing Cross to Shoreditch in the East End district.

Meanwhile, several kilometres away about 25,000 Anti-Nazi League supporters were addressed by Tony Benn, energy minister in Britain's Labor government.

Benn spoke to the crowd, who walked about 6½ kilometres from Hyde Park corner to a park in the southern London district of Brixton.

Only about 30 members of the Anti-Nazi League made the train journey to challenge the front marchers and, kept apart by police, they exchanged insults before dispersing quietly.

Viets Say Chinese Poised at Border

HONG KONG (Reuter) — Vietnam says China has massed troops and deployed hundreds of tanks and aircraft along the Sino-Vietnamese border.

The two communist neighbors have been at loggerheads for months over the exodus of more than 160,000 Chinese refugees from Vietnam. Peking has charged that Hanoi is persecuting and expelling ethnic Chinese.

The Vietnam News Agency, monitored in Hong Kong, quoted the army newspaper Nhan Dan as saying: "Whole divisions of infantry equipped with thousands of artillery pieces, hundreds of tanks and armored cars, and hundreds of fighter planes are poised in the two Chinese military regions bordering Vietnam."

The paper added: "Various types of vessels are carrying out provocations in Vietnamese territorial waters."

Nhan Dan said that in the first 20 days of September Chinese armed forces frequently violated Vietnamese territory to "reconnoitre and carry out nibbling activities and then dig in along Vietnam's border.

"They fired on fishermen, provoked border guards and security personnel on duty, and exploded mines in Vietnamese territorial waters to stop the local people from pursuing other normal activities."

The paper said Peking is slandering Vietnam by accusing Hanoi of preparing for war against China.

"This is only a trick aimed to cover up Chinese intrigues," Nhan Dan added.

It said China is looking for a pretext to continue supplying arms to Cambodia, which has been fighting a border war against Vietnam since late last year.

Relations between China and Vietnam have come under increasing strain over the refugee issue. Seven formal rounds of talks in Hanoi have failed to break the deadlock. And the war of words between the two sides has become more heated and bitter in recent weeks.

The two countries have accused each other of starting bloody border incidents.

Last week China charged that Vietnam is playing the role of a Soviet outpost in Southeast Asia and is attempting to take over the whole of Indochina.

Zambia Now Appeased Over Sanctions Busting

KANO, Nigeria (Reuter) — British Prime Minister James Callaghan and Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda emerged smiling from more than six hours of talks Saturday and both made it clear that Zambia no longer feels cheated over Rhodesia sanctions-busting by British oil companies.

Callaghan flew to this northern Nigerian city Friday after Kaunda, furious over recent disclosures that British companies were circumventing United Nations sanctions, accused Britain of cheating.

The two leaders said they now are more concerned with future developments in southern Africa than in holding an inquest on the past.

Kaunda, asked about sanctions-busting, smiled and said: "We discussed it freely and frankly and reached accord."

Callaghan, who returned to London via Lagos, the Nigerian capital, said the British government has been given assurances that no oil under British control has gone to Rhodesia since the summer of last year.

Kaunda said the talks had been frank.

"I am glad to say we fully agreed on what measures we should take in order to try to save the explosive situation in southern Africa," he added.

Asked if his allegations that Britain cheated now are forgotten, Kaunda said: "I am looking to the future because the situation in southern Africa is very grave. We have not had an inquest. When I asked Jim to come that was not my intention."

The two later travelled to Lagos for talks with Nigeria's head-of-state, Lt.-Gen. Olusegun Basanjo.

BANK WOULD SCRUB DEAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Master Charge emblem might soon disappear from the Olympic baths in Washington's adult entertainment area and 10 adult book stores—if a Maryland bank has its way in a forthcoming court battle.

Executives of the Maryland National Bank say it was all a mistake when its salesman last year sold Master Charge membership to Alpha-Sentura Business Services Inc., which manages the businesses.

Now the bank wants to cancel the membership, which allows customers to charge purchases, because of what the establishments sell. Five are in Washington, five in Baltimore and one in Fayetteville, N.C.

In turn, Alpha-Sentura, based in Baltimore, has filed suit in U.S. District Court there alleging the bank, the state's largest, is making "moral judgments" that harm its ability to compete and violate the constitutional guarantee of free speech.

"No strictly business reasons were offered for the planned cancellation," said David Moeslein of Alpha-Sentura. He said business has increased since the credit card membership was obtained.

The suit, seeking a minimum of $1 million in damages, also lists as a defendant Interbank Card Association, which owns the Master Charge trademark.

"We were unaware at the time (the membership was sold) that the nature of their business was what it is," said Dan Finney, chief spokesman for Maryland National.

Refugees Land

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (Reuter) — More than 1,000 Vietnamese refugees, 500 of them children, have landed on a small uninhabited Indonesian island in the South China Sea, a United Nations official said Sunday.

The official, from the UN High Commission for Refugees, said the Vietnamese had been picked up by a small freighter from four boats in the Gulf of Thailand.

The official said the refugees will be taken to another part of Indonesia before resettlement in third countries.

Funeral Crowd Teargassed

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Police Saturday used teargas on a crowd of more than 3,000 young mourners at the funeral of a 22-year-old student leader in nearby Soweto township.

The singing crowd had attempted to enter a cemetery to watch the burial of Jonas Mzwakhe Machobane, an executive member of the banned Soweto Students Representative Council.

He is alleged to have been shot by police while escaping a raid on a house in Bloemfontein two weeks ago. Police have not given their version of the incident.

As the mourners approached the cemetery, police at the entrance charged them, swinging batons while teargas was used at the crowd. Only about 50 persons were allowed into the cemetery.

Earlier, police surrounded the Methodist Church in Soweto's Jabavu district where a requiem mass was being held for Machobane, a former student at Morris Isaacson High School which was the centre of student protest during the upheaval of black unrest that began in Soweto in June, 1976.

Planter Boxes Do the Trick

Raised planter boxes around an outdoor sitting area or patio will add more space for ornamental plants now that vegetable growing is occupying more ground space.

Gardeners with 50-foot lots find the back portion of their property is quickly used with the needed assortment of vegetables and cane fruits.

Each year there is more encroachment on the grassed area until now the vegetable rows reach almost to the edge of the space reserved for outdoor living.

Much of the pleasure of gardening can be retained by keeping the space adjacent to the home for a relaxation and eating area. It seems to make the garden and its work more a part of daily living.

But sometimes a few more shrubs and other ornamental plants are wanted to add a note of permanency to the picture especially in seasons when the vegetable area is somewhat bare.

Planters will do the trick. With one planter in place and filled with suitable plants, more ideas will come. Winter heathers, perhaps already showing buds, may be a part of the first planter.

With a few daffodil bulbs to bloom in spring a beginning of ideas will be made. Then someone may get the idea for a slender Dogwood in the ground space on the garden side for beauty all year and light shade on the patio in a few years time.

Thus garden pictures evolve, to be gradually built up. To bring more permanency near the house, attach two or more stout braces to the back side of the first planter, for a second much smaller planter at eye level. In this put plants with fragrance, perhaps early spring pansies for the first year, but replacing with something permanent next year. If planted now, buds would form in winter mild spells to open welcoming blossoms when hot coffee is taken outdoors on suitable days. This is keeping in touch with the garden.

On the sunniest side of the patio, a planter of herb plants will ensure their fresh use at meals served outdoors. A sprig or two parsley or chervil with sandwiches; chives on everything (almost) from breakfast eggs to supper salads; and dill leaves, a touch of mint, with basil and summer savory will find their way into soups and hot casseroles right on the spot.

If a barbeque is used, herbs are already appreciated. More permanent, shrubby herbs can find a place in a patio planter for their ornamental value and general fragrance. These will be plants such as lavenders, thyme, rosemary. Sizes are easily controlled by gentle sheering twice annually from the time of planting.

When a solid wall forms on one side of a patio, it is not too difficult to attach stout supports to the wall for holding containers of various sizes for single plants — some upright, some trailing, one such as clematis or the climbing hydrangea to cover the space with foliage and flowers. All must be chosen according to the situation of much shade or full sun.

Planters demand more care than do open ground plantings but they are useful alternatives when garden space is divided for growing food supplies and for living pleasant hours outdoors.

Barber Shop Quartets Booming Along

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Forty years ago two Tulsa men — Owen Cash and Rupert Hall — were indulging in a nostalgia kick, recalling the days when men sat around in barber shops, shooting the breeze, swapping stories and singing.

They recalled the old days of vaudeville and burlesque when it was commonplace to have at least one quartet on the bill.

As a tongue-in-cheek joke the two men formed a new society — the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet singing in America, Inc.

The joke was on them. Forty years later there are now about 40,000 members belonging to 700 chapters spread throughout the United States and Canada.

The barbershopping bug was first brought to Victoria 10 years ago by Saanich police Sgt. Bill Chisholm, who had been a member of the society's Calgary chapter.

The bug bit and today the Victoria chapter — Victoria Village Squires — has 50 members who turn out each Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Saanich Silver Threads Centre on Hampton Road.

Chisholm is lead singer for the only working quartet (registered with the society and eligible to enter international competitions) while the remaining members sing chorus or in woodshed quartets, which, member Art Hammond describes as quartets who sing "purely for the fun of it."

Rounding out Chisholm's quartet, the Totem Tones, are tenor Bill Staton, baritone Arnie Davies and bass Bob Matthews.

A car salesman, Hammond says the infectious lure of barbershopping cuts a swathe across society, drawing from a variety of ages and backgrounds.

Staton, for instance, operates Precise Color Processors Ltd., Davies is a highways department official while Matthews owns Matthews Agencies Ltd., an office fixture and display company.

The Victoria Village Squires even boasts a barber — Joe Zolner of the Continental Barber Shop.

Hammond first got a taste of barbershopping in 1953 when a friend took him to a chapter session in Portage La Prairie, Man.

At that time he was in the Royal Canadian Air Force and about to go overseas.

The memory of the fun and comradeship of that night never left him, however, and when he returned to Canada he joined the Montreal chapter, where he was a member of a quartet that competed in Los Angeles in 1967.

It wasn't until 1977 that a Canadian quartet sang itself to top honors in international competition when the Dukes of Harmony from the Metropolitan Toronto borough of Scarborough won the society's competition in Philadelphia.

On Tuesday the Victoria Village Squires will hold a Barbership Harmony Night at 8 p.m. in the Hampton Road centre, auditioning men interested in joining their fraternity.

Hammond says members range in age from 19 to 70, all caught up in the aura of the days when phonograph and sheet music companies relied heavily on quartets to sell their songs.

Thankful for that first introduction in 1953, Hammond says: "It (barbershopping) certainly helps keep people young. It's a matter of keeping things nostalgic . . . I just have music inside, that's my thing."

Jobs Found for Half Of Displaced Workers

A spokesman for the union representing workers at the James Island dynamite plant says about 45 of 88 workers will be placed in new jobs when the plant closes Sept. 30.

Larry Smith, president of the Victoria local of the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, said some of the workers would have to relocate off Vancouver Island.

When the Canadian Industries Ltd. (CIL) plant closes at the end of the month, only six workers will still have jobs. They will be hired by Continental Explosives Co., the CIL distribution subsidiary.

A joint committee of the union, the company and federal employment officials has been searching for jobs since the closure was announced June 1.

The union, which has represented workers at the plant since 1948, originally as the Canadian Chemical and Explosives International Union, was praised last week at a meeting of the Victoria Labor Council.

"There's been a tendency to go to Sweden or Germany to study employer and union relationships when probably we didn't have to go farther than James Island," said council secretary Larry Ryan.

"My recommendation to students is that they study the James Island experience. It has always been consistent to the principles of good collective bargaining."

The union has never resorted to strike action.

"The closest we ever came was in 1948," said Smith. "That time we got a last-minute settlement."

Smith, who has worked at the plant 13 years, has been spending two days a week on the search for jobs. Though he is one of those to be laid off, he still has no job lined up.

The workers will hold a farewell banquet and dance Oct. 14 at Playland Curling Club.

$50,000 WATER GRANT

North Salt Spring Water District has been awarded the maximum $50,000 grant from the environment ministry to improve water supplies.

In all, the ministry has allocated $1.8 million in grants to about 85 rural water districts.

Almost half the 242 improvement districts in B.C. requested grants, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said.

RCMP's Dirty Tricks: Tale of Two Donalds?

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief Supt. Donald Cobb, who wrote the fake terrorist communique, and Staff Sgt. Donald McCleery, who ordered the barn-burning, were described last week as the inspirational figures in the RCMP security service's law-busting anti-terrorist section in the early 1970s.

Sgt. Andre Pelletier, an administrator in the section at that time, told the royal commission in to RCMP wrongdoing at that time, that Cobb "really turned our men on" when he arrived from Laval University in 1971, a handsome, urbane figure.

Cobb was not only educated, he was sympathetic, a quality valued by the young Mounties, and he was experienced as well.

He brought to them, Pelletier said, details of "how the European forces had successfully met the terrorist attack."

Cobb, now 48, had served in Paris in the late 1950s and had watched the French police deal with the aftermath of the Algerian civil war.

COBB

McCLEERY
. . . man of action

If Cobb was the intellectual force in the section, McCleary was the physical force. Pelletier described him as "a man of action, a very good policeman."

It was McCleery, the legend goes, who went into the streets and alleys of Montreal in late 1970 and found the place where kidnapped British envoy James Cross was being held.

Pelletier indicated that their presence overcame a feeling of frustration that had developed through the 1960s as the Mounties struggled with mixed success to deal with terrorism, an unfamiliar phenomenon.

The new G section came into being in 1971 after Cobb returned from an Ottawa meeting with John Starnes, the diplomat director-general of the security service.

Cobb has testified he sought a special place for the G section so that if it went too far in its anti-terrorist activity, and got caught, it alone would be responsible and not the whole security service.

It isn't clear what Starnes's response was — he will testify later this fall — but G section soon seemed to be operating more-or-less independently.

When underground intellectual Pierre Vallieres urged terrorists to put away their bombs in late 1971 and join the new Parti Quebecois, Cobb quickly drafted a fake terrorist communique rejecting the Vallieres message and had it picked up at drop-off spot by radio reporters, who broadcast it as the real thing.

It went into RCMP flies as the real thing too, because only Cobb and one or two people close to him knew it wasn't.

By the spring of 1972, G section was engaged in what members have testified was "disruptive activity" aimed at pulling adherents away from terrorism.

Some were plucked off the street and taken to remote hotels by plainclothes Mounties who tried to convince them to become informers. The word kidnapping has been used to describe some of these incidents, under investigation by the royal commission.

In May, 1972, McLeery ordered Mounties to burn a barn — to prevent a meeting of Quebec terrorists and U.S. Black Panthers. Later he ordered his men to get dynamite — two Mounties broke into a constructin shed to get some — to be used to reinforce an informant's position in a terrorist cell.

The end, the Mounties have testified, justified the means.

In October, 19712, members of the G section joined Montreal city and Quebec provincial police in a raid without a warrant — later called a break and entry and theft — on the offices of a left-wing news agency in Montreal. Federal solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer maintains the Mounties didn't tell him they were involved.

They also told him the Montreal police were investigating and for this reason he shouldn't reply to a news agency telegram asking whether the Mounties had been involved in the break-in.

It wasn't until 1976, when G-Man Claude Samson, facing charges in a bomb incident, said he had done worse things as a Mountie, that an investigation began. Samson made public the fact that he had taken part in the 1972 raid.

Last year Cobb pleaded guilty, with a Montreal and a Quebec police officer, to authorizing the raid without a warrant. He and the other two were given discharges by Judge Roger Vincent, who said their motives — fighting terrorism — were noble.

The government assured Parliament that this was a unique and isolated case of RCMP law-breaking. But within weeks, the royal commission was appointed at RCMP commission Maurice Nadon's recommendation.

McCleary, it has been suggested, may have forced the issue by threatening to expose other law-bending exploits of the anti-terrorist unit if the government didn't.

The inquiry hasn't been limited to G section which was disbanded in 1973 after two free-wheeling years. Last November, the CBC disclosed that the Mounties have been opening mail, in apparent violation of the Post Office Act, for years. Meanwhile, a royal commission in Alberta uncovered a secret 1972 agreement with the revenue department giving the RCMP access to income tax files.

If G section has done anything, it had opened the RCMP to its closest scrutiny in more than a century of existence. The 19,693-member federal police force, which has a $560 million budget this year, conceivably could be decimated as a result of the inquiries.

A royal commission in the late 1960s recommended that the security service be divorced from the RCMP, a proposal the government may not be able to resist if it is made again, and may not want to. In 1969, the security service got its first civilian director, Starnes, and government recently made Marcel Cadieux, a senior public servant, special adviser to current RCMP Commissioner Robert Simmonds.

On another front, the costs and responsiveness of the RCMP as contract provincial police in eight province — all but Ontario and Quebec — have been questioned. Attorney-General Jim Foster of Alberta, a biting RCMP critic, says the contract Mounties must not only answer to him but inform him. He says they haven't.

As for the G section, where are its members now?

Cobb, as head of the anti-terrorist unit in Montreal, was a key figure in the $100-million Olympic Games security program in 1976. He was being talked about then as a future RCMP commissioner. But after the guilty plea in 1977, and heavy news exposure, he was moved to Ottawa last December and made director of bilingualism in the RCMP.

McCleery was fired in 1973 for his friendship with Mitchell Bronfman, who the RCMP said associated with underworld figures. McCleery has fought for reinstatement. Meanwhile, he runs a private security company in Montreal.

Samson was a constable in 1972 when he, according to Cobb and other police witnesses, almost single-handedly embroiled three police forces in the news agency raid.

He now is doing seven years in prison for a 1974 bomb explosion at the mansion property of Melvyn Dobrin, whose wife Mitzi runs Steinberg's supermarket chain.

The seven-year sentence was imposed partly because Samson, who suffered slight injuries from it, wouldn't say what had motivated him.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald, chairman of the royal commission, said in an interview last week he hasn't yet made recommendations to the federal government and hasn't any target date for doing so.

At least nine weeks of commission hearings now are scheduled to begin Oct. 24. They will bring RCMP commissioners, directors-general of the security service, and solicitors-general to the witness stand to explain how and why the so-called "dirty-tricksters" got loose for so long.

Area's Teachers To Vote

Greater Victoria Teachers Association (GVTA) members will vote Wednesday on a bargaining position worked out by its executive.

GVTA president Trevor Calkins said today he will reveal details after the ratification vote. But he said he won't be commenting on salary demands.

Calkins and Greater Victoria school board chairman Susan Brice say they will keep a low profile on talks this year and try to work out an agreement without going to arbitration.

Calkins said the GVTA exective met once last week with the trustees' negotating committee.

All locals of the B.C. Teachers Federation must determine their bargaining positions before Sept. 30.

The BCTF is recommending all locals demand a 10-to-12 per cent salary increase this year.

But Brice has indicated the board will not agree to the BCTF demand.

The B.C. School Trustees Association is suggesting boards limit teachers' salary increases to a maximum of four per cent.

BCTA president Dave Kandal said each percentage increase in teacher income will cost the taxpayers $6 million.

Kandal said school boards cannot afford a 10 or 12-percent salary increase.

MAN BURNS TO DEATH IN VAN

NANAIMO (CP) — An inquiry has been ordered into the death Saturday of David Wayne Butler, 20, of Cassiar.

Police said that Butler died in a fire in the van in which he was sleeping on nearby Gabriola Island. Firemen had difficulty reaching Butler because the van's doors were locked and had to be pried open.

Police said a portable butane stove in the van is believed to have caused the fire, although it has not been determined if the stove had been left burning.

VSO's Move to UVic Causes an Uproar

The phone at the Victoria Symphony's office has been "ringing off the hook" with calls expressing concern about the sudden decision to hold the new season's opening concerts Oct. 1 and 2 in the University of Victoria's new concert hall, symphony manager Jean Hunter said today.

But although many older patrons are worried about the change of venue — caused by delayed renovations at the Royal Theatre — Mrs. Hunter said to date there have been no cancellations.

"We have managed to talk people back into it," she added.

Symphony officials arranged to switch the concerts to UVic after discovering by chance last week that renovation work at the Royal rules out use of the stage and dressing rooms. The theatre is not expected to be available until Oct. 20.

No official explanation for the delay, or for the failure to notify the symphony, has been given by the theatre's management.

But Hunter said many patrons, particularly older residents without transportation, are alarmed at such a prospect because of the personal inconvenience it entails.

"It means waiting for the Gordon Head bus, which is not as good as the routes serving downtown, and also walking across campus when they get there," she noted.

In an effort to solve the problem, Hunter said she's trying to investigate the possibility of providing a special bus service for ticket holders.

She wants a legal opinion on whether the symphony is entitled to demand this under its contract for the use of the Royal, which expires April.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Morgan's office confirmed today that a performance by renowned opera singer Luciano Pavarotti will take place at the Royal as scheduled Oct. 3 at 8 p.m., despite the fact that renovations will not have been completed by that date.

Freedom of Information Rights 'Will be Won'

Canadians will eventually win the right to freedom of information from provincial and federal governments, says Ted Snyder, president of the 183,000-member Sierra Club of America.

"In the United States, the national government and most of the state governments now have freedom of information legislation," he said. "It's only a matter of time before Canadians get the same thing from their governments."

Snyder, in an interview here, said one of the main causes for the growing distrust of politicians — and violence in the western world — is governments refusing to let people participate in decision-making and keeping information from them.

"It's not right for a handful of men to make decisions affecting the lives of millions of people," he said. "People have the right to be fully informed and to have a say in decision-making."

Snyder said there also is a growing awareness among North American workers that they share a responsibility in environmental matters.

In other countries, such as Australia, workers are already refusing to do environmentally damaging work, he noted.

One of the main aims of the Sierra Club is the preservation of land and the good management of land, he said. That is why the club concentrated so much on forest lands.

"Environmental matters transcend international boundaries," he added. "That's why I'm visiting Canadian Sierra clubs. I'm getting to know your problems."

He said he was pleased to learn there is a growing interest in B.C. for the preservation and proper management of coastal lands.

"Your West Coast Trail is an example," he said. "This trail is now knowm widely in the United States. You can expect thousands of Americans to come here to walk it. I hope soon to be one of them."

Snyder, who is from South Carolina, was elected Sierra Club president last May. This is his first visit to Canada.

Although there are much larger conservation organizations in the United States, such as Audubon and the American Wildlife Federation, he said membership in Sierra is growing fast.

"At one time its membership was made up of people mostly from Pacific states, he said. "Now nearly half are from the eastern states."

Train Kills Boy

MONTREAL (CP) — An eight-year-old boy was killed when he was hit by a CP Rail passenger train on railway tracks in west-end Montreal. Police said Suissa Oded apparently came from beneath other railcars standing on the tracks and failed to see the oncoming train.

SHOTGUN FOUND IN ELK LAKE

Saanich police divers found a sawed-off shotgun in shallow water a few feet from shore in a Saturday search of Elk Lake following arrests the previous night on Hamsterley Road.

Insp. Robin Stewart said another sawed-off shotgun had been found in the bush with the aid of a tracking dog, and two men were charged Saturday with possession of a restricted weapon.

They are Dean Wesley Bowman, 18, and Paul Douglas McRae, 25, who were to appear for plea today.

Residents of the area had told police about noon Friday that guns were being discharged. An emergency response team took up positions in the area and after a time two men bolted from a house and ran towards the lake.

ESTUARY CALL DRAWS FIRE

DUNCAN — Opponents of industrial expansion on the Cowichan estuary fired back at Vancouver Island members of the Social Credit Party on the weekend.

A resolution passed at the recent Socred convention calling for limited industrial expansion as a mean of creating jobs came under fire from Ann Holden, a director of the Cowichan Estuary Preservation Society.

"It's too unbelievable that the Socreds would have the colossal nerve to pass such a resolution," she said. "I'm just fuming inside! It's incredible that they would pass such a resolution at a time when the task force findings, hopefully, are to be made public. Do they (the Socreds) know something that we don't?"

Cowichan Bay marina operator Pete Lambert also expressed disappointment at the Socred resolution despite what he described as widespread public opposition to additional estuary development.

Lambert wanted to know what the Socreds meant by limited industrial expansion and suggested this would simply be opening the door to further industrial growth.

Bob Kennedy, president of the Cowichan-Malahat constituency association, said the resolution was not meant to put pressure on the provincial government or estuary task force. The purpose, he said, was to encourage the government and private interests to "get on with the job" as quickly as possible in the event the task force recommends limited growth of industry.

Frogs in Drinking Water!

Newts, salamanders, snakes and frogs have been turning up in the local drinking water supply, Crofton residents say.

Residents have been told that drinking water should be boiled before use and a fire department member warns that supplies from the small, man-made lake supplying Crofton are so depleted it would be difficult to fight a major fire.

Allan Edkins, a member of the volunteer fire department, said residents have noticed an increase in sedimentation, discoloration and foreign matter in their water.

"I find newts, salamanders and even bits of frog all the time," Edkins said. "In fact I have a filter on my washer and faucets for just that reason.

In a recent letter to residents, municipal clerk Jean MacLeod said the provincial health ministry has advised of possible problems with the water supply.

"The health department will be continually taking tests for your protection," she wrote. "In the meantime, we suggest that you boil all drinking water as a precautionary measure."

Bob Hardy, North Cowichan municipal engineering assistant, said the municipality, which includes Crofton, has not been successful in finding a better water supply even after drilling and calling on the services of a water diviner.

When New England Patriots played Oakland Raiders in a pre-season National Football League game, one of their star players, Darryl Stingley, was hospitalized through an accident on the field. Sunday the Patriots returned to Oakland for a regular NFL game and "won one" for Stingley with a 21-14 victory over the Raiders, scoring the the winning touchdown with 16 seconds to play. Page 10.

Despite holding a wide edge in play, B.C. Lions couldn't get a touchdown in the first half of their Canadian Football League game at Winnipeg Sunday. Six field goals by Luis Passaglia were not enough as Ralph Brock threw four touchdown passes to lead the Bombers to a 32-25 victory and cripple the Lions' playoff hopes. Page 10.

SIX HOMES SET AFIRE

Planes Collide, All Killed

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727 with 133 persons aboard collided in flight with a small Cessna today and plunged into a residential neighborhood in possibly the worst air accident in U.S. history.

Everyone aboard the jet as well as a student pilot and his instructor aboard the Cessna and at least one person on the ground were reported killed. Several others on the ground were rushed to hospitals.

The death toll was apparently the worst for an airplane collision in U.S. history. In December 1960 two commercial planes collided over New York City, killing 128 aboard the planes and six others on the ground.

The worst air disaster in history occurred March 27, 1977, at Tenerife in the Canary Islands, when two jumbo jets collided, killing 582 persons.

The PSA plane, Flight 182 from Sacramento and Los Angeles, was on its landing approach when it collided with a Cessna 150 at an altitude of 3,000 feet, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

"I saw the jet plane . . . It was smoking on the right side," said Phil Hopkins, a witness. "The right inboard engine was burning and it exploded into a fireball . . . and spiralled to the ground."

The 727 smashed into a row of houses in the North Park district, about five miles from the city airport, Lindbergh Field. As it careened along the street wreckage was spewed across a wide area, injuring several persons. At least six homes were set afire.

Two hours after the crash, fires still blazed in at least five of the wood-frame houses that line the streets of the east-central neighborhood, where the plane fell.

Greyish-black smoke billowed over the area and fragments of bodies could be seen on rooftops and in the streets.

Fire trucks were massed in the area, which authorities cordoned off from a crowd of more than 4,000 persons that gathered.

Trading Imbalance Fingered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top official of the International Monetary Fund said today imbalances in trade and growth among industrial countries have led to "a very difficult and potentially dangerous situation" in the world economy.

Jacques de Larosiere, the new managing director of the 135-country IMF, said a sharp decline in the U.S. dollar is primarily the result of these imbalances, which are only partly the fault of the United States.

And de Larosiere made clear he does not expect the dollar will become stable until the major countries bring their economies into closer alignment.

Basically, de Larosiere, a former top French bureaucrat who became IMF director in June, took the U.S. position on the problems of the dollar.

He said stop-gap measures such as huge purchases of dollars on world money markets would not help the dollar in the long run and actually could worsen its position against other major currencies.

The IMF's policy-making interim committee said a stronger U.S. dollar and a return to healthy economic growth around the world depend on better co-ordination of economic policies by the major industrial countries

De Larosiere delivered an opening address to about 3,500 delegates at the 33rd annual joint meeting here of the IMF and the World Bank. U.S. President Carter planned to deliver welcoming remarks later today.

One of the major issues on the agenda of the four days of meetings, a strengthening of the IMF's financial resources, was decided by the interim committee before the formal sessions began.

Committee chairman Denis Healy, Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, told a news conference that the U.S. economy should grow more slowly next year while other countries should speed economic growth.

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian dollar slipped below the 85-cent U.S. level on international money markets Monday for the first time since 1933.

At 11 a.m. PDT it was quoted at 84.98 cents against its American counterpart, down more than a quarter-of-a-cent from Friday's closing rate of 85.28 cents.

Announcements by some leading American banks that they are increasing their interest rates on loans to their most credit-worthy customers to 9¾ per cent from 9½ per cent helped today's slide.

Traders have said repeated increases in U.S. interest rates are causing money market participants to sell their Canadian dollars and buy into stronger currencies.

Friday's final quote was the lowest the dollar has closed at since May, 1933, when it was worth 86.77 cents. Last Monday it changed hands at 85.54 cents, while a month ago it closed at 87.37 cents. The record low of 80.08 cents was set in December, 1931.

The U.S. dollar opened the trading week slightly lower against all major European currencies except the British pound and made a slight gain in Tokyo while the price of gold rose to new highs in light trading.

Gold opened in London at $217.25 an ounce, more than $3 higher than last Friday.

MINNIE MT. HEARING

One of the key planning decisions facing Saanich council in 1978 will be made under the spotlight of a public hearing Wednesday.

The proposed mixed-density residential development by Broadmead Farms Ltd. on the Minnie Mountain area of Ten Mile Point is supported by council's planning advisers but apparently opposed by the majority of area residents.

In an article on page 9 today the Times looks at the claimed pros and cons of this multi-million-dollar development proposal.

3-Day Crawl for Help By Broken Deaf-Mute

SEATTLE (AP) — Joseph Heller, a 33-year-old deaf mute, spent three days crawling for help after he fell five storeys in an elevator shaft, police say.

"I'm amazed that he made it," said Sgt. Floyd Walker. "The torture he went through must have been unbelievable."

Heller suffered fractures of the neck, pelvis, ribs and upper right arm, as well as a broken leg and head injuries, a Harborview Medical Centre spokesman said.

He was reported in serious but improved condition late Sunday. The broken neck did not appear to be serious or paralyzing, the spokesman said.

Police said Heller, bloody and swollen, was found in a doorway of the partially-vacant building Saturday by a passer-by who notified police.

Officer Daniel Fordice said Heller, in barely legible scrawl, wrote "three days" on a piece of paper when asked when he had fallen.

"It's evident that he had been there for that long," Fordice said. "He had blood on his side and it was long dried."

Police traced the 20-metre trail Heller apparently followed through dust and debris in the warehouse-type building. Before even reaching the floor level, Heller had had to climb out of the pit at the bottom of the elevator shaft—an amazing feat with a broken neck, Fordice said.

The elevator doorway on an upper floor was open, with no safety gate across the doorway, Fordice said.

"There was no light in the elevator and it's possible the man could have been stumbling around in the dark and fell down the shaft," he added.

Mideast Peace Plan Extolled to Knesset

Times News Services

Prime Minister Menachem Begin formally recommended to the Israeli parliament today the withdrawal of Jewish settlers from Sinai in exchange for peace with Egypt.

Declaring he spoke "with a heavy heart and a clear conscience," Begin told a sometimes uproarious session of the Knesset that the Israeli-Egyptian accords reached at Camp David, Md., brought Israel "one of the greatest events of our generation."

The moment for which Israelis have yearned since the birth of Israel now is at hand, he said.

"After 30 years and five wars, bloodshed and grief we have reached the moment when we are granted, with heavy sacrifices, the opportunity of signing a peace treaty with an Arab people (Egyptians) numbering more than 40 million," he said.

The parliamentary session was adjourned in uproar shortly after starting debate on the Camp David accords. The recess was ordered after Begin was persistently heckled by a militant defender of Jewish settlements in the Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

An affirmative vote in the Knesset will clear the way for final negotiations to end 30 years of war and uneasy truce between Israel and Egypt. A negative vote will nullify the Camp David agreements.

Reliable sources say Begin argued forcefully in an eight-hour cabinet session Sunday for approval of the Camp David framework for an Arab-Israeli peace agreement. Eleven ministers backed the plan, two opposed it, one abstained and three declined to vote without party authorization. One minister was absent. Both opponents were members of Begin's

$50 LOTTERY WIN FOR CODE BUSTER

EDMONTON (CP) — Cracking the provincial lottery's scratch 'n win system did not give Bob Silverthorn of Tofield, Alta., the big one, but it did make him richer.

The 35-year-old math and science won $50 in Sunday night's draw when he matched the last three digits on two tickets with winning numbers.

"It's not bad getting a $50 return on $1,500 worth of free tickets," Silverthorn said. "I couldn't be happier if I'd won a million."

Silverthorn developed a system to pick out tickets with a prize of free tickets. The message revealing the prize is concealed under a silver patch on the ticket which the holder scratches away.

Customers no longer have a random choice from the available tickets at a sales outlet which Silverthorn said takes away his opportunity to use his system to pick out free bonus tickets.

"If I can pick up another batch of free ones, I will. But I sure don't believe in paying for lottery tickets."

Immersion French Faulted

MONTREAL (CP) — English-speaking students who have spent six years in total immersion classes trying to learn French speak it no better than pupils who have taken five months of "intensive" courses, says the co-ordinator of second-language teaching for an area school board.

Lise Billy, who has been monitoring the progress of 350 students in her board's schools since 1975, presented a study on the immersion system at a conference on applied linguistics held here.

Her study calls into question the technique for second-language teaching that has become almost universal in Quebec during the last decade. (For immersion in B.C. see story on page 7).

One of Mrs. Billy's main criticisms of the immersion method is that language is viewed as incidental to the teaching of regular subject material.

She says students have to guess at syntax because it's rarely, if ever, taught.

Swiss Canton 'Separates'

GENEVA (Reuter) — A national referendum in Switzerland on Sunday voted heavily in favor of self-government for the northern Jura region bordering France in a bid to end 30 years of separatist strife.

Voted ran 4-to-1 to make the French-speaking, predominantly-Roman Catholic region of 68,000 people the 23rd Swiss canton, or semi-autonomous state, the first new one in the Alpine confederation since 1815.

The turnout was larger than average, with 41.5 per cent of the 3.8 million electorate voting. About 82.3 per cent voted to split northern Jura from the Protestant Swiss-German canton of Bern.

The idyllic Jura region of rolling hills and farmland has been part of the Bern canton since 1815 and the desire for independence has sparked violence in the last few decades. Separatist agitatfon led to rioting, arson and dynamite attacks. But only one person has been killed in the violence over the years.

From Montreal, the Mouvement National des Quebecois offered congratulations Sunday to the separatist leaders of the Jura region.

In a message to the Mouvement National du Jura Suisse, Claude Rochon, president of the coalition of Quebec nationalist groups, emphasized the kinship Quebec nationalists feel for "their francophone brothers of the Swiss Jura," who have proved by establishing a semi-autonomous state that "history and geography give way before the right of a people to self-determination."

Striking Posties Await Gov't Move

OTTAWA (CP) - Leaders of striking letter carriers say there are indications the federal government will come down hard against the union's legal strike, now in its fourth day.

"There's no fairness in it," said C. N. Nelson, a vice-president of the 19,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada.

An ad hoc committee of cabinet ministers concerned with the post office plans a special meeting today to discuss the heated dispute, a spokesman in the prime minister's office said. Time and location were not made public.

The meeting would include Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, Treasury Board President Robert Andras, Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet and possibly others.

There are reports that the government will not legislate the letter carriers back to work until the strike position of 22,000 inside postal workers is clarified later this week.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) will be in a strike position early next week, seven days after a conciliation report is filed.

The theory is the government will wait until the CUPW's next move is known and, if necessary, issue one back-to-work law for both groups.

Nelson said about 6,000 carriers in 25 locals are off their jobs today. Just less than one-third of the 22,000 CUPW members were also off the job because they refused to cross letter carriers' picket lines.

A post office spokesman said there was no mail moving from Saint John, N.B., Quebec City, the Ontario centres of Toronto, London, Windsor, Kitchener-Waterloo, and in Edmonton and Regina.

Nelson said workers in those centres likely will be back on their jobs Tuesday morning "and there is a possibility of some others going out."

He did not name the next targets for rotating strikes that started midnight Thursday night in the contract dispute over pay.

"There have been no further overtures from management about further meetings," Nelson said.

The letter carriers say they want full protection from cost-of-living increases plus a six-per-cent increase in basic salaries.

Andras said Saturday "there is no money available for a settlement. The government is absolutely determined."

The Battle Of Minnie Mtn.

Perhaps it's symbolically appropriate that Wednesday's public hearing on a major development proposal for Saanich should be held in a gymnasium, because the evening will be a heavyweight match with plenty at stake.

For the development company, Broadmead Farms Ltd., the potential profit is large.

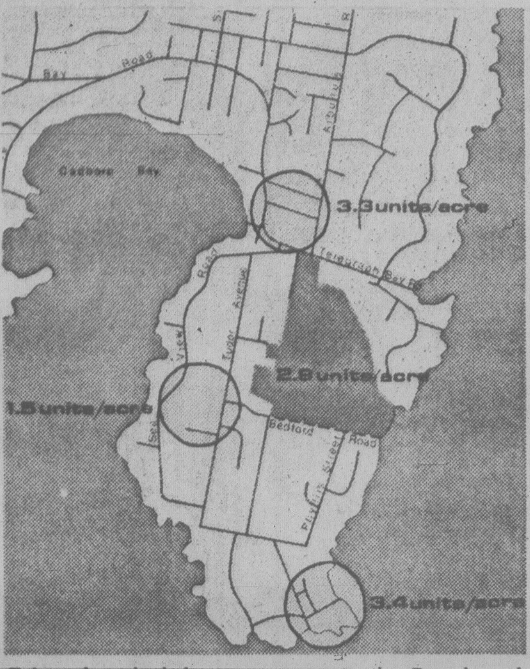
The firm wants to build a large subdivision on the 72-acre Minnie Mountain property between Telegraph Bay Road and Bedford Road.

But most residents of the Cadboro Bay area apparently view the occasion as a fight to preserve the semi-rural lifestyle they now enjoy.

Between the contestants as referee will be the nine civic sages of Saanich council.

The hearing is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the gymnasium of the Cadboro Bay United Church, 2625 Arbutus Road.

To set the stage, the Times attempts here to summarize the principal arguments of both groups.



Triangular shaded area represents the Broadmead development site while shaded circles indicate comparisons with development densities in other areas of Cadboro Bay-Ten Mile Point.

Broadmead: A Stout Reputation

By PAUL MOSS, Times Staff

Broadmead Farms Ltd. can be truthfully described as having a stout reputation and a stout financial base.

As the firm responsible for the exclusive, sensitively designed Broadmead subdivision in the Royal Oak area (a sort of rural Uplands, but less antiseptic and with more trees), it has been cited by planners and elected officials as an exemplary developer.

And it's not exactly on a shaky financial footing, having been purchased in 1972 by the Guinness family, makers of the famous British brew and for many years heavily involved in B.C. real estate development.

To quote the parent group's advertising slogan, Broadmead is now attempting once again to convince all concerned in Saanich that Guinness is good for you.

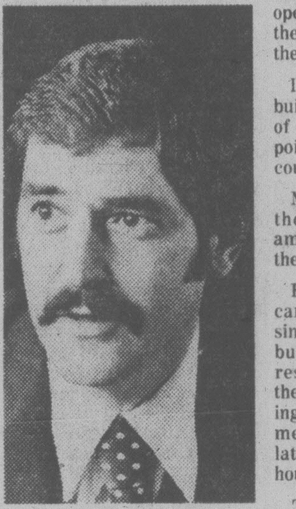
In the introduction to its application for a land-use contract, the firm says its development philosophy has always been to stress such aims as respect for the land, protection of the environment and the creation of homes which will be of lasting value to the community.

"In a fast-paced world, we are prepared to be accepted as a bit old-fashioned about some things. We prefer to approach a project thoughtfully; doing it slowly but doing it properly."

The result of this slow approach to Minnie Mountain over the past four years is a proposal to build 210 units of mixed housing consisting of 77 single-family homes on large lots, 62 townhouses and 71 condominium units contained in four four-storey buildings.

Broadmead notes the density of 2.9 units per acre is less than the density of at least two nearby residential areas.

And Merv Mawson, the firm's vice-president in charge of operations, said in an interview the density is almost half that found on single-family subdivisions in the Gordon Head area.



MAWSON
. . . lower density

The developers claim that their mixed-density approach using a variety of housing types and cluster formats allows them to set aside a far higher proportion of land for recreational use than would be the case under a traditional single-family subdivision pattern.

They say their scheme envisages 17.9 acres of recreation land for community enjoyment, including all of the waterfrontage, 14.5 acres of open area and virtually all the prime viewpoints within the triangular-shaped site.

In addition, they plan to build more than three miles of walking paths, lookout points and two public tennis courts.

Mawson pointed out that the open space provided amounts to 24 per cent of the total site area.

Broadmead's submission is careful to stress that the 77 single-family homes will be built adjacent to existing residential development in the Ten Mile Point area, acting as a visual and environmental buffer between the latter and the proposed townhouses and condominiums.

This higher density development will be located in "areas that are not environmentally sensitive," such as former rock quarry sites, it explains.

Mawson said the attached townhouses will be blended into the topography and tree cover in such a way that they'll look more like a series of single-family homes than comnventional townhouses.

As for the four-storey condominium blocks, he added, they won't be visible from anywhere except the water.

Among other positive factors, Broadmead says the development would:

—Produce a net tax dollar yield to Saanich of at least $175,000 a year. (Mawson says this is an ultra-conservative estimate, made before the recent assessment legislation changes, and his guess would place municipal revenue closer to $250,000);

—Enhance the value of neighboring residential properties;

—"Provide an acceptable alternate lifestyle for area residents who may wish to change into a smaller home but not leave the community."

Residents: A Change in Lifestyle

Spokesmen for the Cadboro Bay Residents Association, which has mounted strong opposition to the proposed Broadmead Farms development on Minnie Mountain, say the the group is not anti-development and definitely not anti-Broadmead.

The residents admire what the developers have done with their tasteful subdivision at Royal Oak and would welcome them to their neighborhood — if the intention was merely to build another development of high-quality single-family homes.

But erstwhile fans become vocal opponents over the central issue of Broadmead's intention to introduce townhouses and condominiums into what has been traditionally and exclusively a single-family residential area.

What this proposal involves, according to association president Richard Boss, is essentially a change in lifestyle.

"Broadmead wants to change the zoning to create a different style of housing — which really is an urban style of housing," he said. "But Ten Mile Point and Cadboro Bay have always had a semi-rural style of housing and we want to keep it that way.

"We see this development as a change in our style of living."

In the longer term, the association fears that if the Broadmead development becomes a reality it will prove a fateful precedent. Future councils might approve other, perhaps less sensitive, developments and in time the once-tranquil area would be irrevocably altered.

Under a mixed-density approach which Broadmead says makes good planning, economic and environmental sense, Saanich council is being asked to approve a 210-unit housing scheme for the Minnie Mountain site.

The CBRA calculates that a maximum of 130 units would be possible if the developers built under the present single-family zoning. Therefore, it argues, Broadmead is seeking to exceed the present limits by 60 per cent on a straight unit count.

But Boss concedes that whether the property is developed to single-family pattern or the higher density proposed by Broadmead, the actual number of residents is likely to be about the same — 550 to 600.

On the company's claim that the Minnie Mountain project would yield a minimum of $175,000 in tax revenue, Boss noted that as there are about 25,000 homes in Saanich, the gain works out to roughly $7 per home.

"The residents of Cadboro Bay feel that $7 a year is not justification enough to rezone this land," he added.

Another association spokesman, executive member Ken Smyth, is not overly impressed with Broadmead's donation of 17.9 acres of land for recreational purposes.

For one thing, he said, this figure includes about 3½ acres of so-called "expanded road allowance" (for treed walkways); for another, most of the land in question is so steeply sloped as to be unsuitable for development.

"It's not developable in the usual meaning of the term — unless one uses special, expensive construction techniques as in Hong Kong, for example," Smyth said.

"The few times I have walked in these areas it was more like going for a climb."

Boss said the municipal planners apparently believe that mixed-density housing is sociologically desirable. But he said the Broadmead plan won't provide anything new in this respect, because the Cadboro Bay area already has a wide variety of houses ranging from older, modestly-priced homes to large, expensive homes on large lots.

Both Boss and Smyth challenged the developers' references to providing alternative accommodation for present residents who might wish to move out of large homes into townhouses or condominiums.

They pointed out that the purchase price of around $145,000 for a townhouse unit or $120,000 for a condominium apartment pins them firmly in the luxury bracket, probably well beyond the financial reach of the majority of Cadboro Bay residents.

Push for 11% Mortgage

There are pressures forcing the mortgage interest rate towards 11 per cent but so far they have been resisted, Royal Trust Victoria manager Alan Aldous said on the weekend.

There would be "strong consumer resistance" to 11 per cent mortgage rates and everyone wants to avoid another increase, he said in an interview.

Rates have been forced up from 10.25 per cent to 10.75 per cent over the summer, in response to rate increases by the Bank of Canada.

Another round of rate increases may be in the offing in Canada following a decision Friday by the U.S. federal reserve board to increase its rates to 8 per cent from 7.75 per cent.

Canadian rates usually rise parallel with American increases in order to attract foreign investment here.

Aldous said it is significant Ottawa has indicated it wants to hold the line on interest rates this fall, at least until the Canada Savings Bond issue is sold by mid-November.

"Whether the rates can be held remains to be seen. There are upward pressures."

Aldous said that while interest rates have gone as high as 12.25 per cent in Victoria, consumers are not in a mood to pay high rates at this time.

The rates of 11 to 12.25 per cent were prevalent during a real estate market boom when buyers felt they could afford high interest payments because the house they bought would increase in value by $3,000 or $4,000 a year.

WARM AND GRITTY

The whirlpool at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre was out of operation for about eight hours on the weekend but was expected to be back in use again by noon today.

The culprit was a breakage in the filter system that allowed part of the bed of sand through which the water filters to get into the water line.

Duncan Russell, supervisor of parks and recreation, said neither of the centre's other two pools were affected because the three pools are on separate filter systems.

Welfare Pickup

Social assistance cheques will be available Thursday and Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at local offices, a provincial human resources ministry spokesman said today.

Recipients have been asked to pick up the cheques because of disruptions in mail service caused by the letter carriers' rotating strikes.

Recipients should phone the closest district office first

District offices are at: 1820 Blanshard, 1318 Esquimalt Road, 1520 Fairfield, 2002 Fernwood, 3750 Shelbourne, 85 West Burnside, 965 Alston, and 435 Simcoe.

On-the-Spot Firing Halted Marguerite

An on-the-spot firing of an engine room worker on Saturday delayed the Victoria-Seattle sailing of the provincial government's Princess Marguerite, forcing 600 passengers to make the return trip by the Black Ball's MV Coho or the Washington State ferry Evergreen State.

Tiny Himes, headquarters representative of the Seafarers' International Union in Vancouver, said today the man was dismissed after refusing to carry out an order without the supervision of an engineer.

He said the union members did not threaten to walk off the job but would not carry on until the matter was resolved.

He said they resented their co-worker being summarily dismissed after he had been crewing on the Marguerite for at least two years. Himes said the refusal to carry out the assignment without supervision was made in the interest of safety.

The man was reinstated after meetings with the ship's master, chief engineer and other officials, and the Marguerite sailed empty at 7:15 Saturday evening.

She was back on her normal runs Sunday and today although fog in Puget Sound delayed Sunday's runs by half an hour.

Officials of the B.C. Steamship Company, which operates the vessel, could not be reached for comment. They were aboard the Marguerite on her run from Seattle to Victoria this morning.

The company covered the cost of bus and ferry service for the passengers travelling to Seattle.

Due to the confusion at sailing time, some passengers may have made their own way back and will be reimbursed on submission of claims, a spokesman said.

MAN STABBED

Gerald Joseph McIvor, 30, of Victoria is in Victoria General Hospital with stab wounds to the chest and stomach following a fight at 3 a.m. Sunday on Broad Street.

City police said a man in his 20s has been charged with assault with intent to wound and will appear in provincial court today.

Insp. Angus Stewart said four or five persons, including a woman, were having an argument that led to a struggle. One of the participants apparently was being throttled when the knife was pulled, Stewart said.

McIvor is in good condition in hospitaL.

Seymours: Kingpin of Tidal Passes

WHEN I WAS A BOY working in the woods 12 miles or more inland from Menzies Bay, I used to be puzzled by a low, continuous muttering too deep for wind in the trees. Finally I asked an old logger what the sound might be.

"That's the tide," he told me. "A big tide booming through the Seymours."

Like all oldtimers, he pluralized the narrows that run between Quadra Island and the Vancouver Island main.

He also spoke of the Seymours with respect bordering on awe.

Of all the many tidal passes that thread the island archipelago of the British Columbia coast, this is the mightiest. True, there is at least one saltwater rapids — the Nakwakto draining out of and into Slingsby Channel — that belts along at a more furious pace. Sectionally, the Yuculta and the Skookum Chuck may be more spectacular. But there is none that gives such a sense of power unleashed . . . of destructive and hostile forces at work . . . as Seymour Narrows.

I first went through the Seymours on a little steamer that served the Upcoast. In those years, Ripple Rock still reared its underwater pinnacle in the gateway, its position marked by a set of tall standing waves.

The steamer shuddered, rolled and twisted in the grip of currents still strong even though slack water was near. It was a tense experience; not until we were through the narrows and straightening away for the north did I relax my grip on the rail.

Ripple Rock is no longer a horrendous threat to navigation. In a masterly engineering feat that involved tunnelling out from Maude Island and planting a vast tonnage of explosives, the federal authority blew its ship-killing peaks to smithereens. Even so, the Seymours with its 14-knot tide — which runs considerably faster in the surges — remains a force to be reckoned with by mariners.

Since that first steamer junket, I have been into the Seymours in a variety of craft. Familiarity has never bred contempt. I'm still taut as a fiddle-string when we enter, and mightily relieved when we put the narrows astern. I agree with one of Captain Vancouver's intrepid officers who, from a ship's boat under oars, described the pass as the most nightmarish marine spectacle his eyes had ever beheld.

You can get a view of sorts of the Seymours from a blacktopped turn-in off the Island Highway a few miles north of Campbell River. But impressive though this prospect sometimes is, distance robs the scene of its majesty and terror.

Where fish are, there you will find fishermen. Fortunately, or perhaps unfortunately, the salmon fishing is often good in the narrows. A daring and knowledgeable boatman can flirt with the Seymours and get away with it. A number of guides routinely take parties in and bring them safe out with good catches.

Inevitably, though, fools rush in. They tamper with waters where even large and heavy seiners come to grief, and each year, the Seymours exact a mortal price. If it weren't for those same guides I mentioned, the price would be higher.

Routinely, though with sulphurous remarks about jerks who brave the narrows in putter-boats without even a lifejacket to buoy them, they yank greenhorns from their swamped or overset boats to safety.

Last year, a friend of mine was waiting for tide in a Maude Island niche when he looked out to see an old man and a small boy afloat in a 12-foot skiff on a deceptively smooth slick.

They were daring the tiger, but they remained serenely unaware of that fact.

My friend hollered and waved, urgently flagging them toward shore. His efforts got him only an uncomprehending stare.

"It was a question of which would get them first," he said later, "a boil or a whirlpool."

In a matter of seconds, the waters parted beneath them, and their little boat was sucked under. By a miracle, the whirl spat them out, to be plucked from a watery hell.

Granddad, dripping in his rescuer's boat, was both aggrieved and indignant.

"My neighbor told me it was perfectly safe in here," he protested.

Meanwhile, I see by the local paper that the Seymours are still up to their evil tricks. Another large and sturdy seiner capsized, at the cost of yet another life.

BLAZE PROBED: Police and fire inspectors are investigating the origin of fire that destroyed this paint truck at the Greater Victoria School District maintenance yard on Cecelia Street Sunday. Firemen were called at 6:58 a.m. to find the 1966 vehicle in flames in the school district compound. A nearby truck appeared to have been broken into but nothing was reported missing. Vic Hornsby, a maintenance yard employee, looks over the damage. (Bill Halkett photo).

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market reversed an earlier gain to drop more than a point in active midsession trading.

Trading resumed at 1 p.m. in shares of IAC Ltd. and Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. following news that the two companies have been discussing a possible amalgamation with Continental Bank. IAC last traded at $21 a share and Canada Permanent at $19.

Trading halts continued in shares of Provigo Inc., M. Loeb Ltd., Horne and Pitfield Foods Ltd. and Burns Foods Ltd. pending announcements. Provigo holds an 80-per-cent interest in Loeb, which has 85.5-per-cent control of Horne and Pitfield.

Provigo last traded at $19 a share, Loeb at $7½, Horne and Pitfield at $13½ and Burns Foods at 15¾ a share.

Among other industrials, Fraser Cos. A climbed 3½ to $41½ on the sale of 1,466 shares, Brinco ¾ to $7, Consumers Glass ¾ to $21¾, Nu-West Development A ¾ to $19 and Asbestos Corp. ⅝ to $46¾.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower again against a background of rising interest rates.

The First National Bank of Chicago announced this morning it was raising its prime lending rate from 9½ to 9¾ per cent.

Philadelphia's First Pennsylvania followed suit shortly therefter, and other leading banks were expected to fall in line soon.

It marked the third increase in less than a month in the basic charge on blue-chip loans.

Meanwhile, analysts said the Federal Reserve seemed to be exerting more upward pressure on the open-market money rates upon which banks base their prime rates.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today, with the 85-stock composite index down 0.08 at 212.95.

Volume at 2 p.m. EDT was 197,368 shares traded, compared with 567,298 shares traded up 2:30 p.m. Friday.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices dropped sharply near the close of light trading Monday on the London stock market in response to the continued Ford Motor Co. strike.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 509.4, off 9.2.

Leading industrials moved lower, while gold shares rose narrowly.

Canadian issues were mixed.

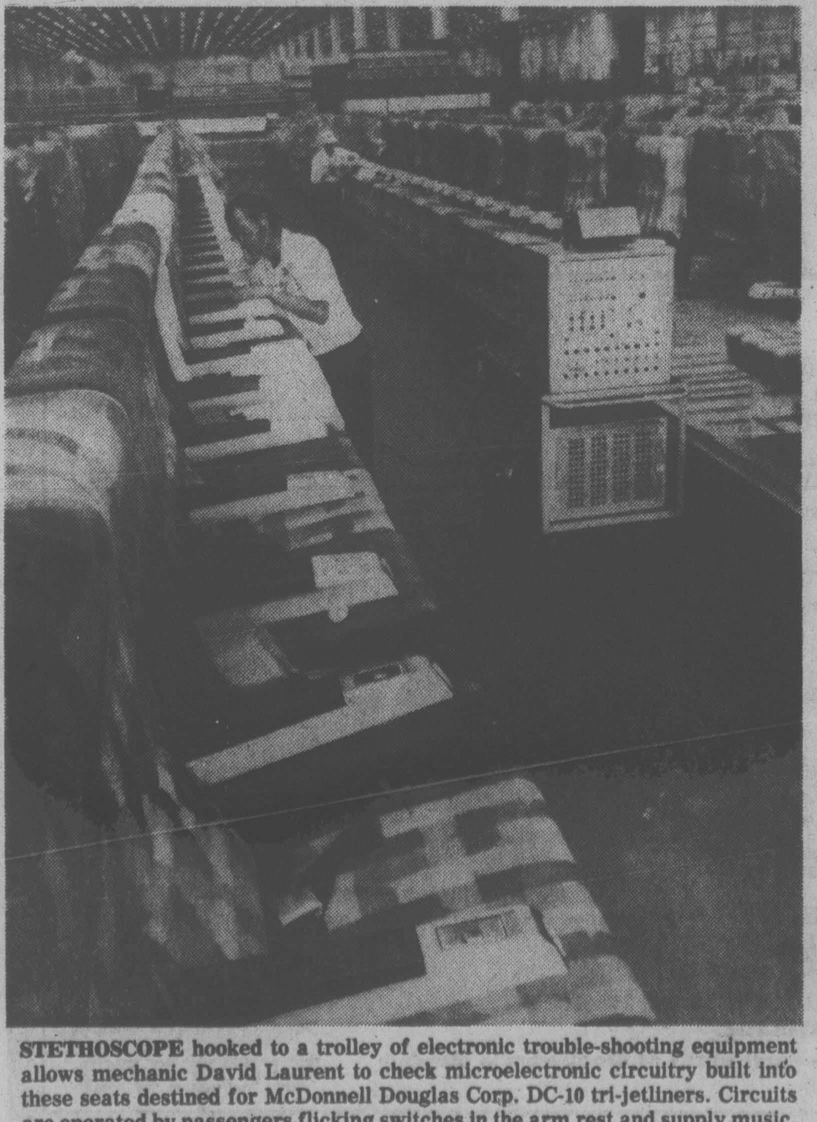
Japanese Motor Vehicle Exports Down

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese motor vehicle exports fell one per cent in July from the previous month, totalling 389,162 units, an increase of 2.9 per cent from July, 1977, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association said.

The overall value of the exports was $1.45 billion, down two per cent from June but up 24 per cent from the same month one year ago, the association said.

In the first seven months, exports gained 17.9 per cent from last year to 2.84 million units worth $9.63 billion. The value figure climbed 41.2 per cent from the same period last year.

Passenger car exports in July totalled 247,498 units worth $836.8 million.



STETHOSCOPE hooked to a trolley of electronic trouble-shooting equipment allows mechanic David Laurent to check microelectronic circuitry built into these seats destined for McDonnell Douglas Corp. DC-10 tri-jetliners. Circuits are operated by passengers flicking switches in the arm rest and supply music, movie sound, reading lights and the stewardess.
